Local Businesses Adapt To Survive In Pandemic

By Alyshia Korba

Along with the readily apparent effects of the COVID-19 pandemic on public health, the virus has also challenged the health of the local and national economy.

When a stay-at-home order issued by New York State Governor Andrew Cuomo went into effect March 22, 2020, all non-essential businesses were forced to shut down. Businesses that were permitted to remain open included pharmacies, hardware stores, utility companies and food services, among other industries.

While these businesses were allowed to be open, they had to operate under COVID-19 safety guidelines. These guidelines included social distancing, mask-wearing and limiting building capacity. These guidelines have followed each industry that has been allowed to open since the state started its phased opening in May 2020.

Consumership decreased because fewer customers were able to enter a building at one time, people were unwilling to enter a building if they were required to wear a mask and people were worried about becoming infected with the virus.

While these factors had detrimental effects on the local economy, the COVID-19 pandemic also brought about changes that may have had positive impacts. High-population areas like New York City had the greatest rates of COVID-19 cases, and this inspired some people to move to more rural areas like Delaware County. The county's occupancy tax is currently approximately 40% higher than it was in 2019, said Ray Pucci, president of the Delaware County Chamber of Commerce. This suggests that the county saw more visitors in 2020 than in previous years.

Along with a population increase, many people began spending more time at home and sev-

Safely homegate for the football playoffs

Tailgating is a time-honored and beloved tradition among football fans. The festive atmosphere on the grounds outside the stadium prior to kick-off compels millions of people to see their favorite team in person each football season.

The smell of barbecue and the thrill of pickup games in the parking lot is integral to fans' game day experiences, but such get-togethers were largely forbidden during the 2020-21 football season. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, many college and professional football teams significantly reduced the number of fans they allowed inside their stadiums, and many prohibited pre- and post-game tailgating.

eral industries profited off of this newly-found free time. Many building supply and hardware companies saw an increase in profits as people had more time to work on home renovation projects.

Other industries that saw increased consumer activity include liquor stores and real estate. Pucci said in 2020, Delaware County had the best real estate market since 1985. Pucci said he expects many people who were long-term visitors during the pandemic to stay in the area once they see what the county has to offer. He said this area has better internet availability than much of upstate New York, and while property value in the county has increased, it is still low in comparison to other places in New York.

"In a weird way, we have really been coming together for this moment," Pucci said.

While unemployment in the county increased in 2020 from 2019, it is low in comparison to other counties in the state. The highest rate of unemployment Delaware County saw in 2020 was 11% and as of December, the rate was approximately 4.7%, Pucci said. The statewide unemployment rate was 8.1% as of November 2020, according to the New York State Department of Labor. In November 2019, the statewide unemployment rate was 4%.

Along with relatively low unemployment rates, Delaware County also saw an increase in sales tax revenue from 2019 to 2020. According to data from the New York State Department of Taxation and Finance, Delaware County is the only county in the Southern Tier that had an increase in sales tax revenue. The county saw a .9% increase in 2020 as of August. The monthly percentages in the county are similar to those of other counties, apart from an outlier in March when the county had a 159.3% increase in sales tax revenue. The county with the second highest increase in March was Schuyler County with a 27.4% increase.

While the overall economy in the county has not been significantly damaged, some individual businesses struggled to maintain profits. Many of these were retail businesses that were forced to close in March. Catskill Seasons LTD is a sports and outdoors supply store in Margaretville that would have had to close under the governor's regulations, but owner Linda Ballard was determined to stay open. She started stocking local food products along with her sports apparel and equipment so the store could be classified as a food service. This allowed her to keep the store open for the entirety of the stay-at-home order, and the store had its most successful year since opening in 2017.

"I just did what I had to do to keep my business going," Ballard said. "I'm following my dreams and keeping my dreams alive, and I'm not gonna let them shut me down."

Ballard said she stocked up on items that would be high in demand like paper products, baking supplies and personal protective equipment (PPE), which she was able to supply to local emergency medical services (EMS), fire departments and other frontline workers.

"I made sure to give back to the community because the community was giving back to me," Ballard said.

Pucci said the chamber of commerce has been supporting businesses by compiling information and resources for businesses, offering workshops for business owners and advocating for local businesses in meetings with elected officials.

He said that as businesses reopen, it will be important for business owners to work on restoring consumer confidence in the safety of going into stores. Pucci recommended businesses do this by informing customers of their sanitation practices and enforcing mask-wearing and social distancing guidelines.

Pucci said it is also important that customers support local businesses. He said wearing a mask while visiting local shops is the best way for consumers to help the local economy.

"It's a sign of respect, it's a sign of courtesy to the business owner," Pucci said. "Before you walk into that store, put on a mask."

replace the atmosphere of a stadium parking lot tailgate, fans can do their best to recreate a safe experience at home for this year's football playoffs. "Homegates" can help fill the void for seasoned tailgaters until restrictions are lifted and parking lots once again become party central on weekend afternoons.

Stay outdoors. It can be tempting to host fellow fans indoors this playoff season, but staying outside can reduce the risk of exposure to the COVID-19 virus and help hosts recreate an authentic tailgating atmosphere for themselves and their fellow fans. Set up a television, seating and some exterior heat lamps outside and watch the game outdoors. Let guests know the party will take place outside. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention notes that the COVID-19 virus spreads more easily in indoor spaces than outdoor areas, so hosts who are unsure if guests can stay outdoors for the duration of the game should keep that in mind when planning the festivities. If necessary, invite only those fans who commit to staying outdoors all day.

Load up on food. Food is a big part of tailgating, so any successful homegate should feature a lot of food. Encourage guests to bring their own portable grills or outdoor fryers, as well as their own plates and eating utensils, to reduce the likelihood that guests will contact potentially contaminated surfaces. Just make sure everyone has enough elbow room to safely cook up their signature tailgate foods.

Provide a safe way for guests to use the restroom. Hosts and their guests will need to use the restroom at some point during the day. It's hosts' responsibility to provide a safe place for guests to relieve themselves. Before the first guest arrives, clean the bathroom with disinfectant top to bottom, and make sure to have hand sanitizer and wipes readily available to everyone. Ask that guests waiting to use the restroom remain outside until it's free to use.

Homegates have replaced tailgates this football season. Thankfully, football fans can embrace various safety measures to recreate the tailgating experience for themselves and their fellow fans. TF211615

HOROSCOPES

ARIES – MAR 21/APR 20

Be aware of the impact words can have, Aries. You may think what you're saying is innocuous, but it really can do harm without intent. Be conscious of what you're saying.

TAURUS – APR 21/MAY 21

You don't want to disappoint people who rely on you, Taurus. But remain conscious of what you can and cannot offer other people. Find the right balance.

GEMINI – MAY 22/JUN 21

Spend some time alone this week to sort things out in your head before you react to a situation that has been on your mind, Gemini. Don't let others affect your state of mind.

CANCER – JUN 22/JUL 22

Cancer, someone draws a proverbial line in the sand and challenges you to take action. This can be a conflict for you, especially if you're not yet ready to make a move.

LEO – JUL 23/AUG 23

Leo, a steep climb is before you, but with patience and perseverance, you will eventually reach the summit. Once you do, you will enjoy an extreme sense of accomplishment.

VIRGO – AUG 24/SEPT 22

Try not to niptick your actions, Virgo. Once you make a decision, stand by your choice and defend it. Typically your gut and your mind do not steer you in the wrong direction.

LIBRA – SEPT 23/OCT 23

You may need to put rational on the side and be a little reckless in the days ahead, Libra. This may cause some temporary disarray, but take a chance.

SCORPIO – OCT 24/NOV 22

You may think you have the perfect plan laid out, Scorpio. However, double- or even triple-check all of your data. Doing so will provide reassurance.

SAGITTARIUS – NOV 23/DEC 21

Sagittarius, what you expect to happen this week may turn out to be the opposite of what actually happens. Be prepared for any scenario to come your way.

CAPRICORN – DEC 22/JAN 20

Emotions may cloud your judgment, Capricorn. Try to look at a situation clearly so you can weigh-in in an impartial manner so you have no regrets.

AQUARIUS – JAN 21/FEB 18

Sometimes the best things that happen to you can occur in the most unlikely of places, Aquarius. Always keep your eyes open and ready for surprises.

PISCES – FEB 19/MAR 20

Don't fret if you don't think the same way as another group of people, Pisces. This week you will more fully develop your perspective.
