Market Music: Don Gilkinson, Aug. 26

CCE sponsored Walton Farmers' Market will host guitarist/singer Don Gilkinson on Friday Aug. 26 from noon to 2 p.m. as part of the Grant Rogers' Project series featuring traditional music at the market. Gilkinson has 50 years of experience working with several country, bluegrass and square dance bands as well as doing solo gigs. His repertoire is rooted in traditional country seasoned with blues, early rock n' roll, bluegrass and just a hint of jazz/swing. He is self-taught, but recently pursued further music studies at Berkeley School of Music and thereby expanded his guitar-performing skills. To accompany his singing, he'll use a combination of flat-picking and finger-picking on guitar. He invites his audience to dance, sing along, or simply listen, feeling it's all about the music.

This music series has one remaining performance, on Sept. 2, featuring the Deposit area duo Bea Summers and Barb Acker, although the Walton Farmers' Market will continue to be offered Fridays from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. through September. The music feature of the market is made possible with a tourism grant from the Delaware County and the Walton Chamber of Commerce as well as several anonymous donors.

Do you have what it takes to be a leader?

Leaderful Delaware, an initiative of the Delaware County Chamber of Commerce, is seeking people committed to community service who would benefit from strengthening leadership skills while developing a personal professional network. Our 2022 program will start on September 13 with an in-person session in Delhi. We will continue to meet on the second and fourth Tuesday afternoons, from 1 to 4 pm, through October. Attendance at our November programs will either be in-person or through a zoom connection (your choice!). After no classes in December, we will resume with hybrid classes through May. An in-person summation/graduation program is planned for mid-May. Participants will learn about critical issues facing Delaware County and the Catskill Mountains region through lectures, discussion groups, personal introspection, and panel discussions featuring current community leaders. The innovative curriculum is based on scientific theories of organizational and community leadership. Leaderful Delaware offers an alternative to the traditional model and calls on leaders to be concurrent, collective, collaborative, and compassionate. Strategies include effective facilitation, dialogue skills, active listening skills, managing conflict, intercultural competence, leadership styles, and peer coaching. Candidates will be selected based on their: Commitment and motivation to community service. Previous community service or desire to become involved in community activities. Interest in public service and desire to learn more about public policy. Potential to advance to a leadership position within their companies. Commitment to remain in Delaware County. Preference will be given to Delaware County residents but non-residents are encouraged to apply. Applicants may be sponsored by a business or a community leader. Tuition is $300 and includes materials and fees. Application due Sept. 1. For more information and an application visit delawarecounty.org, email info@delawarecounty.org or call 607.746.2281.
