DEC to lower water levels at Washington Lake

By SHANTAL RILEY
sriley@tcnewspapers.com

Contractors for the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation have begun work to lower water levels at Washington Lake. Water levels have swelled since perfluorooctanesulfonic acid (PFOS) was found in and around the lake, which was the city's primary source of drinking water until May.

Contractors began preliminary work on Monday.

"Our plan is to lower and maintain the water level through a direct discharge of Lake Washington water to Silver Stream, after first treating the water with portable, granular-activated carbon treatment units," DEC Deputy Commissioner of Remediation and Materials Management Martin Brand wrote in a letter to Newburgh City Manager Michael Ciaravino last week.

Brand said the discharge will lead to a portion of Silver Stream, downstream of diversion gates that were closed to cut off the flow of water from Silver Stream, which also flows through the recently-designated Superfund site at the Stewart Air National Guard Base.

Gillibrand calls for blood tests in wake of PFOS

sriley@tcnewspapers.com

U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand is calling on the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to offer blood testing for perfluorooctane sulfonate (PFOS) to City of Newburgh residents.

"Residents of Newburgh should be able to drink their water without having to worry about whether it is going to harm them, and they have a right to know the extent of how this water crisis has already affected them," said Gillibrand in a statement last week.

She urged the CDC to work with the New York State Department of Health to offer blood tests in order to get "clarity about the extent" of the PFOS contamination. "We need to use every tool and resource the government has, from testing to funding to scientific expertise, to fully investigate the sources of this contamination and prevent it from happening again," Gillibrand said.

The senator joins a chorus of officials to demand federal action following the discovery of PFOS in the city's drinking water supply in May.

Samples showed extremely high levels of PFOS at an outfall pipe located at

Land bank on track for zombie funding

By SHANTAL RILEY
sriley@tcnewspapers.com

New York State Attorney General Eric Schneiderman made a stop in the City of Newburgh last week to announce the launch of a program to support the rebuilding of abandoned properties. The program aims to provide affordable housing while funding renovations for distressed and decaying buildings.

"We know if people are given the chance, they're going to try and do something about their communities," said Schneiderman, speaking on Lander Street last Friday.

The Neighbors for Neighborhoods program devotes $4 million to the rehabilitation of abandoned buildings through land banks like the Newburgh Community Land Bank. The rehabbed buildings will provide affordable apartments to low and moderate-income individuals and families.

Administered by the non-profit Enterprise Community Partners, the program requires housing units to remain affordable for at least 20 years. Newburgh Community Land Bank Executive Director Madeline Fletcher said she is "confident" the Newburgh land bank will qualify for the program in the coming months.

Land banks around the state will submit applications to join the pilot program in the fall. Participating land banks will transfer ownership of the properties at low or no cost to people living in the community. Each property will qualify for $50,000 in renovations subsidies.

"Neighbors for Neighborhoods helps communities reclaim their neighborhoods from blight and will help generate the affordable housing stock that New York families need," Schneiderman said Friday.

Renovations must include exterior rehab to ensure "curb appeal," which, the AG's office states, is a "critical part of boosting property values in neighborhoods plagued by vacant homes." The program is anticipated to provide up to 80 affordable, rental units in each land bank municipality.

The program is paid for through a $7-billion settlement with Citigroup and a $16-billion settlement with Bank of America, which Schneiderman negotiated in 2014.

"Funding through this innovative pilot program will help to ensure the continued revitalization of our neighborhoods by bolstering the availability of high-quality, affordable rental units and attracting local investors to invest in their community,"

Newburgh Mayor Judy Kennedy said last week.

The Abandoned Property Neighborhood Relief Act, written by Schneiderman and signed into law by Governor Andrew Cuomo in June, requires banks to maintain abandoned properties throughout the foreclosure process or face stiff penalties.

In July, the AG's office announced the Zombie Remediation and Prevention Initiative, a $13-million grant initiative funded by the state's settlement with Morgan Stanley. The initiative provides funding to municipalities to help manage and remediate abandoned foreclosure homes, also known as "zombie properties."

the nearby Stewart Air National Guard Base, which the state Department of Environmental Conservation declared a state Superfund site on Aug. 12. The base is now suspected as the primary source of the water contamination.

"Residents are understandably concerned about their historical exposure to elevated levels of PFOS and the possible health effects of this exposure," Gillibrand wrote to the CDC on Aug. 16.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency lowered its health advisory limit for PFOS from 200 parts per trillion to 70 parts per trillion in May. "As you know, studies indicate that exposure to PFOS over certain levels may result in adverse health effects, including high cholesterol, high blood pressure, kidney cancer, testicular cancer, liver damage, low birth weight and other serious health effects," Gillibrand wrote, though these effects are not well understood.

Testing would reveal the extent of residents' exposure to the chemical, she said, and "help inform their discussions with medical providers."

The City of Newburgh switched to using water from Brown's Pond in May and then to the Catskill Aqueduct in June.

City police, attorneys speak out at police-community forum

By SHANTAL RILEY
sriley@tcnewspapers.com

“Relationships between police departments and communities around the nation have been strained and recent events have strained them more.”

The words hovered on a projection screen at the Newburgh Free Library Auditorium, which hosted the fifth police-community relations forum presented by the City of Newburgh Police Department last Thursday.

Transparency is the “key to positive police and community relations,” city Police Chief Dan Cameron reading from the screen. “It’s forums like this that allow us to show everyone on what we’re doing on a regular basis,” the police chief said, and prevent the kind of violence seen in places like Baltimore and Dallas.

The city has seen its fair share of violence, Cameron admitted, three weeks after a man died from gunshot wounds after walking into St. Luke’s Cornwall Hospital and five months after another was shot dead in front of his son on Benkard Avenue.

With help from federal law enforcement, city police conducted raids this summer on the Yellow Tape Money Gang, said Cameron. They were “major contributors” to shootings in the city earlier this year and shootings have decreased since, he said.

“In 2015, 55 people were shot in the City of Newburgh,” he said, noting the city’s population of about 30,000 people. That year, there were 518 gun-related calls for service and 58 illegal handguns recovered. “You can’t ignore those statistics,” he said.

Community-policing initiatives

Community policing was one of his main goals when becoming acting police chief last year, Cameron said, and despite staff cuts, city police have managed to implement foot patrols and several community-policing programs. “We recently logged our 1000th foot patrol,” Cameron said.

The department’s Youth Police Initiative, offering week-long programs for kids and police take part in relationship-building activities, has turned into one of the most successful YPI programs in the county. “We have the most YPI graduates in the nation,” Cameron said.

People attending the forum asked if the drug market fueled violent crime in the city. Cameron responded yes.

“A very small percentage of (the population) is committing a majority of the violence,” said Cameron. “Of that small percentage, the majority are associated with groups.”

City of Newburgh Police Chief Dan Cameron explains transparency “is key” when it comes to community policing.

The Group Violence Intervention Program focuses on individuals associated with groups committing these violent crimes. “We offer help to group members who want to change,” said the program’s manager Isabelle Rojas. “The message we give them is a moral message against violence.”

Operated in partnership with Catholic Charities of Orange County, the program offers those on parole or probation means to change, including services for substance addiction, mental health and employment. “We have an honest conversation with them about their lives,” said Rojas, with no police involvement. “We’re thinking outside the box.”

When asked why gangs were so entrenched in the City of Newburgh, Cameron said it was, in part, due to social stresses such as poverty and lack of educational opportunity. “I was in the gang because I had no family,” said Hamzah Alameen, speaking about his time in a gang in the Bronx. “The gang cared about me.”

“That’s why we’re bringing in group-violence programs and social services,” said Cameron, speaking to the socioeconomic aspect of the problem. “We’re finding progressive ways to handle the violence.”

Youth focus

Regina Cieslak of Team Newburgh, a coalition focused on preventing drug abuse, explained the group was working to prevent opiate and prescription-drug abuse by young adults.

Eighty-three percent of youth who abuse prescription pain drugs get them from family and friends, she said, and often from home medicine cabinets within reach. Cameron said a drug lock box to dispose of unused drugs will soon be installed at the City of Newburgh Police Department.

The forum also covered the Orange County Juvenile Detention Alternatives Initiative. “The goal of JDAI is to improve the juvenile justice system,” said program Coordinator Steve Pack.

Approximately 76 percent of children 7-to-15-years-old who enter the juvenile justice system have mental health or substance abuse problems, said Pack. “What we’re finding is the majority of kids getting in trouble need some kind of treatment,” he said.

The multi-agency initiative is designed to offer alternatives to traditional juvenile detention, Pack said. Since 2009, the program has worked to reduce the time it takes for a child to appear in court following an arrest by more than half. “It was taking 90 days before they got into court,” he said.

When children are placed in a juvenile detention setting, Pack said, “We make sure that institution is clean and safe that it’s a rehabilitative setting.”

“Years ago, it used to be that kids who stole a shirt... would be prosecuted,” said Chief Assistant County Attorney Tiffany Gagliano. “We don’t want to prosecute that kid. We want them to go into a diversion program.”

Gagliano spoke about the county’s Family Engagement Specialist Program, which assists families of youth in the juvenile justice system by offering assistance with schooling, the court process and needed services. Sixty-three percent of families that were contacted have accepted these services, said Gagliano.

Due to the success of the program in Newburgh, it has been expanded to Middletown, said Gagliano. “We absolutely want to involve the families and the parents,” she said. “It’s one of the goals and focuses of the program.”

And, when city police were accused of brutality while subduing a man last month, it was his family that helped quell rumors he was beaten by police. “They didn’t see anything wrong with what the police did,” said Cameron, after they saw body-camera videos taken by police.

The man was eventually brought to the hospital and then sedated by hospital staff, said Cameron. It was later learned he was high on PCP. Cameron said he and the majority of city police officers support the use of body cameras due to just such incidents. “We would rather have the full story,” said Cameron.

So far, the City of Newburgh Police Department has generated more than 19,000 body-camera videos, he said. On Monday, city police reported a gun buyback event resulted in the sale of 53 guns at the city Activity Center on Saturday.

DEC to lower water levels at Washington Lake

Contractors for the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation have begun work to lower water levels at Washington Lake.

“All work will be funded by the State Superfund as part of DEC’s ongoing response to the PFOS contamination in Lake Washington,” Brand said.

The City of Newburgh was forced to stop using the lake as a source of drinking water following the discovery of PFOS in the city’s water supply in May. High levels of PFOS were found at the Stewart Air National Guard Base, which is connected to the lake by Silver Stream. The DEC declared the air base a state Superfund site on Aug. 12.

The temporary, granular-activated carbon units planned for installation at the lake use the same technology as a granular-activated carbon system the state will install at the city’s water treatment plant, said Brand. The DEC will also install pumps to pump at a rate of at least 3,000 gallons per minute and 3,000 feet of temporary piping to discharge lake water into Silver Stream.

“This plan is designed to reduce the water levels in Lake Washington to avoid a release of PFOS contaminated water over the spillway and into the Quassaick Creek watershed in the event of an extreme weather event,” said Brand.

The lowered water levels will also provide “protection to maintain the structural integrity of the Lake Washington Dam,” Brand said. “With the source of PFOS now linked to the Air National Guard Base as a new state Superfund site, DEC is now able to use its authority under State Superfund to expedite and streamline the approval process for this work at Lake Washington.”

Brand said the DEC’s designation of the air base as a class-2 state Superfund site identifies the base as “a potentially responsible party” for the contamination of the city’s public drinking water supply, unlocking “the full authority and resources of the State Superfund law to ensure expedited site clean-up and provide resources for response actions like this one.”

Brand promised the DEC would maintain close oversight over the project. “Be assured that we will be monitoring the operation of this system closely, including by taking samples to test for the presence of PFOS and ensuring the system operates appropriately and in a manner protective of public health and the environment,” he said.

New retailers coming to Route 300

One of the last remaining available parcels of commercial land along the Union Avenue strip in the Town of Newburgh is going to be redeveloped. An old truck depot adjacent to the Newburgh Mall is being razed and the three-acre parcel will make way for a new Mavis Tire retail store and a Buffalo Wild Wings Restaurant.

All town approvals have been granted for the construction to begin, said realtor Richard Lease, who brokered the deal, which may also see a medical facility built on the same parcel in the future.

The Buffalo Wild Wings will be built and operated by the Banta family, which owns three other Wild Wings restaurants – in the Town of Walkill, Wappingers Falls and Oneonta.

The family business also owns Banta’s Steak and Stein, also on Union Avenue, just over the Newburgh Town line in the Town of New Windsor. “We are talking to people right now about leasing space out, probably tearing the building down and reconfiguring the site,” he said. Specific details have yet to be worked out.

IN BRIEF

Boxing club owner pleads guilty in heroin distribution case

Orange County District Attorney David M. Hoovler announced that on Monday, August 22, 2016, Raymond Rivera, 49, of Newburgh, the owner of the Newburgh Boxing Club, pleaded guilty to the felony of Conspiracy in the Second Degree. It was alleged that Rivera admitted he was one of the main suppliers of heroin to a drug trafficking organization, which operated and controlled the area of First Street in the City of Newburgh.

At the time he pleaded guilty Rivera admitted to Orange County Court Judge Craig Stephen Brown that he conspired to engage in the sale of more than a half ounce of heroin, which he knew was going to be sold on the streets of the City of Newburgh.

Rivera

Rivera had been arrested on June 7, as a result of a ten-month-long narcotics investigation, dubbed “Operation Punch-Out”, which included the use of wiretaps and other electronic surveillance. On that day, members of the New York State Police Community Narcotics Enforcement Team (“CNET”), in conjunction with the City of Newburgh Police Department and the Orange County District Attorney’s Office, executed multiple search warrants and made over twenty arrests. Law enforcement officials recovered more than 56 grams of unpackaged heroin, over 1,000 individual packages of heroin, 28 grams of cocaine, over $8,000 in U.S. currency, scales, packaging material, cutting agents and a loaded .45 caliber Highpoint pistol. The street value of the narcotics seized was over $18,000.

Under the terms of the plea agreement, Rivera will receive a sentence of five to fifteen years in state prison when he is sentenced on September 27, 2016.

Hoovler thanked the New York State Police CNET and the City of Newburgh Police Department for their efforts in this investigation. District Attorney Hoovler highly commended CNET for their investigation, given the complexity of the case.

Assistant District Attorneys Neal Eriksen and Kerry Kolek assisted in the investigation of the case and are prosecuting all of the defendants charged in the operation, including Rivera.

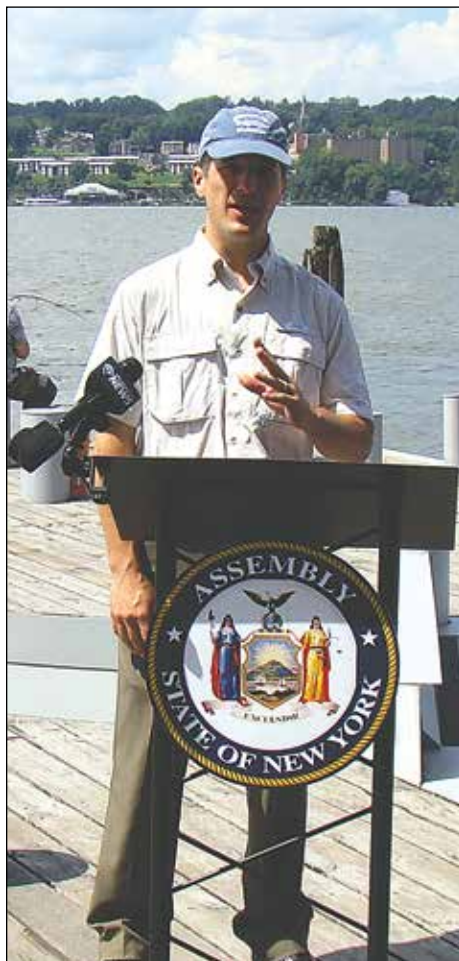

“It is particularly disappointing when it is discovered that respected community figures, who could have served as role models, succumb to the allure of quick narcotics profits,” said Hoovler. “This narcotics investigation, ‘Operation Punch-Out,’ and the recent ‘Operation Chopper’ narcotics investigation, demonstrate the prevalence and sophistication of narcotics trafficking operations in Orange County. These organizations can only be disrupted through the use of electronic surveillance, used in the context of long-term, multi-agency investigations.”

Officials oppose increased barge anchorages in Hudson

By MARK REYNOLDS
mreynolds@tcnewspapers.com

In June the U. S. Coast Guard announced a proposal to increase the number of anchorage areas in the Hudson River for commercial barges from the current two to as many as 10 sites that would accommodate 43 berths and cover 2,400 acres. Some are being proposed in acutely sensitive ecological areas. Most of the berths would be classed a long-term anchorages.

Since the announcement opposition continues to mount in communities up and down the river and across the political spectrum. Currently there are anchorage areas in Yonkers and Hyde Park but consideration is being given to expanding these to include sites in Kingston Flats South, Port Ewen, Big Andy Bicking director of public policy for Scenic Hudson, spoke at the Beacon waterfront on Friday to oppose a U.S. Coast Guard plan to allow commercial vessels to anchor along the Hudson River between Yonkers and Kingston.

Riverkeeper's Kate Hudson (left) and state Assemblyman Frank Skartados (right) spoke at a press conference in Beacon on Friday to oppose a U.S. Coast Guard plan to allow commercial vessels to anchor along the Hudson River between Yonkers and Kingston Rock Point, Milton, Marlboro, Roseton, Newburgh, Tompkins Cove and Montrose Point.

It has been reported that the proposal was sparked by the recent end of the ban on the export of oil produced in the U.S., with estimates stating that this has doubled the production of oil domestically. The Coast Guard is saying that their proposal is meant to improve safety and efficiency for the large barges, however, critics counter that claim, saying that safety will be compromised and that the oil companies simply want to "park" these barges in the Hudson River until they can get the best price for their product.

Last Friday NYS Assemblyman Frank Skartados organized a press conference at Long Dock Park in Beacon to voice his opposition to the proposal. At least five large barges are slated to be parked nearly halfway out in the river off of this newly created scenic town park. He said it is hard to imagine "how horrible it would look if we saw nothing but barges and oil tankers parked here that would so adversely affect the mighty Hudson, America's heritage river."

Skartados said the Hudson River "has long been a passageway for commerce and is a major tourist draw to our region with the Walkway Over the Hudson, wineries, historic villages and scenic parks along the river...The Federal government must really be insensitive and clueless as to the environmental and economic impact this would have on us, on our local economy, our tourist economy and our efforts to really clean up the Hudson River."

It was pointed out that some towns, such as Lloyd, get their drinking water from the river, and a significant oil spill would be nearly impossible to clean up, leaving thousands of people without water.

Marlborough Supervisor Al Lanzetta said his town has received $1.5 million in grants, another $500,000 in private foundation money, $135,000 to develop a Local Waterfront Revitalization Plan and "countless volunteer hours" that have gone toward revitalizing the waterfront.

Lanzetta said Marlborough's economic, cultural and recreational future is tied to having access to the Hudson River.

"The thought of barges and commercial traffic blocking our views and impeding access to the future use of the deep water docks at the Milton Landing Park is unacceptable," he said, "The vision for our community's waterfront should be acknowledged and respected."

On Monday evening the Marlborough Town Board passed a resolution opposing the Coast Guard's proposal for additional anchorages in the Hudson River and urged the agency to conduct public meetings on their plan.

Kate Hudson, Director of Cross Watershed Initiatives. Riverkeeper, said the risks to the river far outweigh the benefits. "Oil cannot be recovered if it is spilled [and] it will permanently poison our river." She said vessel operators have misled the public, calling their proposal "nothing new, we have been doing this forever," however, she said this action would be a huge increase in barge traffic and would not cut down on pipeline or rail transport as some proponents have stated.

Officials: Don't close Cornwall ER

sriley@tcnewspapers.com

Local officials are calling on the New York State Department of Health to reject St. Luke's Cornwall Hospital's application to close its emergency room in Cornwall.

"To anyone who has taken the time to listen to the emergency responders and others in my district, it is clear SLCH's plans could put lives at risk and that having an emergency department locally located in Cornwall saves lives," Sen. Bill Larkin stated in a letter to state DOH Commissioner Howard Zucker.

In July, the hospital announced plans to close the Cornwall emergency department effective Oct. 1. In a post on the hospital's website, the decision was described as necessary following seven years of decline in visitation to the Cornwall emergency room.

According to the hospital, the closure will result in a savings of $3.2 million. "New York State is requiring hospitals to reduce unnecessary hospitalizations and emergency department visits by 25 percent," the hospital states. "The Cornwall ED saw an average of fewer than two patients per hour in 2015. Of those, fewer than one in ten needed hospitalization, which occurs on the main campus in Newburgh."

The Newburgh emergency room was relatively quiet on Monday afternoon. Tanisha Evans was visiting a relative there. "They should keep it open," she said, referring to the Cornwall emergency department. "It's not busy here today but I've seen it get real bad."

Larkin underscored the point. "Driving to the Newburgh emergency room will, for many of my constituents, more than double the time it takes to receive emergency care, and in all likelihood, they will be met by an overcrowded emergency room," he said.

Assemblyman James Skoufis and more than a dozen politicians, including Orange County legislators Kevin Hines and Chris Eachus, and New Windsor Supervisor

George Green signed a letter addressed to the DOH describing a lack of transparency by the hospital.

"To our knowledge, no actuarial study or formal analysis has been conducted to determine the impacts of the Cornwall emergency room's closure on life and health," the letter reads. "Most notably, how many lives will be lost as a result of this decision?"

The hospital highlights the fact the Newburgh emergency room is five miles from the Cornwall campus, adding "five urgent care centers have opened within nine miles of the Cornwall ED in recent years."

However, Skoufis claimed, "true emergencies cannot be treated at urgent care centers. Additionally, three of the five urgent care centers are in Newburgh, just as far if not farther than SLCH's Newburgh emergency room; and the other two only provide 12 hours of coverage during weekdays and 10 hours during weekends."

The letter also chides the hospital for communicating with residents and officials "after the decision had already been made."

"This is a community hospital and decisions that impact the community so profoundly should not be made in a vacuum," Larkin said, who warned the hospital against "arbitrarily shuttering an emergency department to meet balance sheet challenges."

The hospital also attempted to close the Cornwall emergency department in 2013, but withdrew its application to close the emergency room following a swell of public opposition.

St. Luke's Cornwall Hospital serves approximately 250,000 patients per year. In 2015, the hospital announced it would enter into a "passive parent relationship" with Montefiore Health System, with Montefiore serving as the parent organization.

Honor Flight to serve 1,000th veteran

By GARY M. AYD

For the fourth year in a row the Teamster Horsemen of 16 North put on a resounding show and cookout to benefit Honor Flight and Toys for Tots in Wallkill on Aug. 14.

The event has traditionally raised around $2500 for each charity, and 2016 numbers expect to hold true.

"We split the money down the middle 50/50," John Joyce, one of the event organizers said. "Honor Flight is a great organization and we love raising money for them."

Honor Flight is a non-for-profit organization that assists veterans of foreign wars visit monuments to them in Washington DC. The local branch, generally flies out of Stewart or Westchester airport.

"It's a full day for the veterans," Joyce said. "They leave around 7 a.m. and don't return until 8 or 9 at night."

Currently Honor Flight is focusing on WWII and terminally ill veterans. The next flight, departing out of Stewart Airport, will be Saturday September 10 with the preflight send-off at 7 a.m. and the welcome home rally at 8:30 p.m. This flight will also mark the 1000th veteran to be aided by the Hudson Valley chapter of Honor Flight.

"To reach this milestone of giving 1,000 area veterans the thrill of visiting Washington, D.C., with their veteran colleagues, to see their respective memorials our nation has erected to honor their service to our country is a tremendous privilege for us," said Board Chairman Frank Kimler.

Each veteran is accompanied by a volunteer, personal "guardian" who is responsible for ensuring that veteran's trip is a memorable one. Guardians are responsible for covering the cost of their trip.

"We encourage them to contact us and let us know of their interest," added Kimler. "We are asking the region's veterans organizations to reach out to us with names of veterans who would like to make this trip."

HVHF's remaining flight is Saturday, Oct. 29 and will depart out of Westchester County Airport in White Plains.

HVHF serves veterans from Orange, Ulster, Dutchess, Westchester, Rockland, Sullivan and Putnam counties in addition to Pike County, Pa., Bergen County, N.J. and Fairfield County, Conn. Veterans from other surrounding counties are also considered.

New threat for the Hudson?

The sloop Clearwater recently returned to the waters of the Hudson, after undergoing lengthy repairs in dry dock. The replica of an 18th century sailing vessel, the Clearwater was launched in 1969 to fulfill the vision of the late musician and activist Pete Seeger to gain awareness of the need for a cleaner and healthier Hudson River. Today, the majestic 106-foot long sloop is recognized as America's Environmental Flagship and its crew works to provide innovative environmental education programs, advocacy, and celebrations designed to expand people's experience, awareness and stewardship of this magnificent natural resource.

It has taken a generation of activist like Pete Seeger, as well as ordinary citizens to clean up the river and enable us to appreciate its beauty and its value as a recreational resource. It is no longer the dumping ground for raw sewage and toxic chemicals that defined it previously.

But now a new threat appears is apparently emerging, one that many believe could jeopardize the beauty of the river and undermine its value as a recreational resource. The Coast Guard is considering adding new anchor points for barges in the channel that stretches roughly from Kingston to Yonkers. The proposal consists of having 43 new anchorages, at 10 different sites, covering an approximate 2,400 acres that would station barges carrying Bakken crude oil. The plan, though far from fruition, has sparked outcry up and down the river, with elected officials joining with representatives of The Clearwater and the Hudson Riverkeeper in opposition.

In the last 10 years, the Town of Marlborough has received over a million and a half dollars of grants, in addition to over a half million of private foundation monies, and countless hours of volunteerism, to develop our waterfront area along the Hudson River. Most recently, we received a $135,000 grant from the State to do a Local

The Create Peace Project

The United Nations General Assembly declared September 21 as World Peace Day, a day devoted to strengthening the ideals of peace, both within and among all nations and peoples. The theme for 2016 is "The Sustainable Development Goals: Building Blocks for Peace". We, as citizens of the City of Newburgh, both individually and as a community, need to begin a conversation in our hearts, minds and with each other about Peace as a choice and not just a conversation initiated as a response to violence. We need to think and speak about Peace, and every day we should pause and consider our actions. Do we know inner peace? Are we peaceful with our loved ones, our friends, co-workers, neighbors and strangers? Do we respond to others in a peaceful manner? The time has come to make peace the way we live every day and with everyone we come in contact with.

You are invited to participate in this conversation during the month of September. It's a start to a more peaceful Newburgh.

Saturday mornings in September, there will be hour-long meditations in Downing Park to help you in your quest for inner peace. Downing Film Center will be showing a peace-themed movie and Newburgh Free Library will also be taking part in this project as peace builders.

There will be a 2-month (September & October) Art/Poetry exhibit at Karpeles Museum, The Create Peace

Project, with a peaceful reception on September 24. All of the above events will be announced on Facebook and in the Mid-Hudson Times Calendar. You will also notice Peace posters throughout the City, displayed by Partners in Peace.

Restaurants, businesses and clergy are invited to get on the "Peace Train" and you are invited to join in and organize a peace project. Perhaps a peace walk, a toast for peace, interfaith peace ceremonies, a peace flash mob, picnics for peace, a peace choir, and/or peace prayers. Or just spread peace with a smile and a handshake.

Each and every one of us can make a positive difference. We "must believe in peace and work at it," (Eleanor Roosevelt). Peace is possible where the rights of every human being are recognized and respected. Let's all become Peace Partners for the entire month of September.

New threat for the Hudson?

Waterfront Revitalization Plan for our community, wrote Town of Marlborough Supervisor Al Lanzetta in a recent letter to the editor. "The reason we have been so successful in securing taxpayer monies is the shared agreement that our economic, cultural and recreational future is tied to our access to the Hudson River.

"The thought of barges and commercial traffic blocking our views and impeding access to the future use of the deep water docks at Milton Landing Park is unacceptable, Lanzetta concluded.

The same argument can be made in other communities that share the shores of the river: Lloyd, Newburgh, New Windsor and Pete Seeger's city of Beacon have all made substantial investment in the Hudson as a source of recreation and economic revitalization. So, too, has the County of Orange which developed the Kowawese Unique Area at Plum Point.

We've spent a generation moving forward. A half century of progress should not be compromised by conveyors of crude oil.

NEWBURGH HERITAGE

Newburgh made a splash in two world wars

Last Sunday, more than 50 people gathered and listened to New Windsor Town Historian Glenn Marshall relate the history of the amazing Newburgh Shipyards. Those shipyards, located on River Road where Steelways Inc. is today, built 17 cargo ships for World War I and for the post-war recovery effort. Thousands were employed and it put Newburgh and New Windsor back on the map as a national ship building location.

By the end of 1918, the war ended and so did the demand for vessels to supply troops and allies. The Newburgh Shipyards closed and its massive facilities were adapted to several other enterprises.

Then along came another world war – a broader and longer war than the first. Newburgh went back into the shipbuilding industry with the opening of the Eureka Shipyard at the site of today's People's Riverfront Park beside the public boat launch. Again, the clang of hammers rang out downtown and the blinding arc light of welding torches could be seen along the shore.

Marvel Shipyards didn't build supply ships in the 1940's; they built barges and they repaired naval ships damaged in battle. Sometimes, Newburghers would look down Washington Street and see cranes moving and aligning steel plates to become the base and sides of a barge or a drydock. Sometimes Newburghers would awaken in the morning to find that a giant destroyer had been towed in overnight to be repaired or a big freighter had steamed in to be retrofitted for war service. Once in a while, the ships in for work at Eureka were so big they nearly obliterated the view out to the river and over to Beacon. Like the Newburgh Shipyards, Eureka's mission was well-served by the deep channel along south Newburgh's shore that allowed large ships to tie up.

This year, Doris Presutti, wife of

former Newburgh Mayor, Don Presutti, afforded me the privilege of reading through her mother's collection of Eureka Shipyard newsletters. Doris's mother was a Eureka employee and was a writer for the newsletter, the Eureka Splash, later named the Eureka Sprinkle. Blessedly, she saved most of her old newsletters. They tell a tale of hard work and dedication to an effort that consumed our city's energy during those long years of World War II. America geared up quickly after the attack on Pearl Harbor that brought us into WWII. By April, Newburgh's Eureka Shipyard was laying the first steel plates for a naval barge. That spring, the company newsletter referenced their location below the hill of Washington's Headquarters with an article headlined "Spirit of Washington Envelops Eureka Yard." In it, the author said, "Just think!

On the very ground where riggers are hoisting the sides of Navy lighters and where the keels of Army tugs are being laid, the Father of our country walked and pondered...the same principals that we're building ships as fast as we can today to defend."

Among the documents saved by Doris's mother, I was most intrigued by a little pamphlet published by the Navy Department entitled "The Fleet That Never Sailed." Inside was a list of vessels and their silhouettes – similar to the identification pamphlets school children collected at the time. "This fleet has tremendous striking power," the text read. "It would rule the ocean wherever it appeared." But, "this fleet will never sail," it warned. Those 48 ships are the ones that can't be built because of absenteeism (nationwide, one shipbuilder in every twelve off each day for sickness or injury). The little pamphlet was a graphic reminder to stay alert and careful; avoid accidents; get sufficient sleep and adopt healthy habits. "Work for your boys in the Navy, not for the Axis!"

Down at Eureka, hundreds of Newburghers did just that making sure, as they were coached, that "each splash of a new launch was another nail in the coffin of Fascism."

SUNY Orange Gallery presents A Vision and A Verse

As a working photographer and publishing poet, Margaret McCarthy has long been intrigued by the possibilities of combining these two passions - photography and poetry. The interplay between image and text creates a third thing - something more than the sum of its parts. What emerges from the synergy between the two?

A Vision and A Verse: The Wheel of the Year in Word and Image

Neo-romantic in style, her photography is inspired by the archetypes of myth and dream. Her goal is to reach the viewer on an intuitive level, with images that are visually, psychologically, and spiritually compelling.

Margaret McCarthy

She accomplishes this by making images that link the past and future, inner and outer worlds, art and commerce.

A Vision and A Verse will be on display in the Mindy Ross Gallery, Kaplan Hall through October 6, 2016.

At Newburgh Last Saturdays August 27, the 4 to 7 p.m. reception will give McCarthy the opportunity to meet viewers as well as have a book signing of her book Notebooks from Mystery School. She will give a reading beginning at 6:15pm in the gallery.

The reception and exhibit are free and open to the public.

A graduate of New York City's School of Visual Arts, McCarthy works as a professional photographer in New York City; her photographs have been widely exhibited. She publishes an electronic broadside.

The Mindy Ross Gallery is located in Kaplan Hall which is situated at the corner of Grand and First Streets, Newburgh. Free and secure parking is available in the Kaplan Hall garage accessible at 73 First Street.

Get an A+ in health this new school year

By AVI SIBLER, MD,

Pediatrician, Cornerstone Family Healthcare, Chief Medical Officer

There is a lot to be done as summer comes to an end and we begin to prepare for a new school year. Along with getting the perfect outfits for school and making sure your child has all of their school supplies, it is important to remember to schedule their back-to-school physical, too. Any school-aged children should receive an annual physical regardless if they need one to attend school, play sports or to go to camp.

A physical exam is one of the few times that children see their physician for a scheduled check-up. In one visit there is a lot to cover, but if you come prepared your child will leave the doctor's office happy and healthy!

Why does your child need an annual physical?

Some parents have asked why their child needs to come to the office for a complete physical every year, even if they seem perfectly healthy. Children are not "little adults," and a lot can change as each year goes to the next. An annual physical examination is a very important safeguard. We are able to take the extra time to examine the whole child, including areas not inspected during most sick visits.

What should your child expect at a physical?

If you have small children and they are hesitant about going to the doctor it might be helpful to tell them beforehand what to expect. Typically during an exam, physicians will check a child's height, weight, blood pressure, pulse, heart, lungs, vision and hearing, behavior, reflexes, and motor skills. To be on the safe side doctors also like to check for high cholesterol, lead poisoning, and scoliosis. Depending on your child's age they also will touch on safety, whether it's about bike and stranger safety for young children or safety regarding alcohol, drugs, and sexual activity for teens.

How can you prepare for your child's annual physical?

Your doctor may start out the appointment by discussing with you and your child about their nutrition, their medical history, regular diet and physical activity as well as ongoing health conditions, like asthma or allergies. If your child has a medication chart for school this is a great time to talk about current medication and refills needed throughout the year.

As a pediatrician, I always tell my patients that they should be prepared to answer the following questions: Do you know how many times your child missed school last year and why? Has your child suffered from any sports-related injuries, visits to the emergency room or urgent care? Has your child been hospitalized or had surgery within the last year? How is your child doing in school academically and socially? Being prepared for and answering these questions will help the doctor when they complete the physical.

Don't forget to discuss immunizations for your child with your doctor. Keeping immunizations up-to-date will keep your child healthy and safe from diseases that can be highly contagious. Vaccines for pertussis (whooping cough), Meningitis, Hepatitis B, Polio, Chicken Pox, Influenza, Human Papillomavirus (HPV), and the measles, mumps and rubella are all recommended for school-aged children.

To help you get an A+, Cornerstone Family Healthcare (formerly The Greater Hudson Valley Family Health Center) has added convenient Sunday hours in pediatrics! Schedule your physical today!

Recognizing cyberbullying

Before social media became so prevalent, instances of bullying were somewhat easy to recognize. However, with a majority of children now engaged in social media, bullying may not end with the ringing of the school bell.

Statistics from the i-SAFE foundation show more than half of adolescents and teens have been bullied online, and about the same number have engaged in cyberbullying. More than 80 percent of teens use a mobile phone regularly, making it easier for repeated cyberbullying.

Cyberbullying takes place through electronic technology and differs from traditional forms of bullying. It can occur via text messaging, blogging, updates to social media sites and/or phone conversations. What makes cyberbullying more difficult to detect and remedy is that sometimes this type of bullying is veiled in secrecy.

Those who engage in cyberbullying can create aliases and accounts under false names. As a result, tracking down bullies can be challenging.

There are things that parents and children can do to put a stop to unfortunate instances.

- Parents who feel their child is not emotionally ready for the responsibility of a digital device can hold back on purchasing a smartphone or choose one with limited features. Some schools set strict limits on phone usage at school, and children who go from school to home and vice versa may not need an "emergency phone" that can open bullying opportunities.

- Adolescents and teens should feel comfortable talking to parents without the fear of reprimand. Otherwise, they may hide instances of cyberbullying or not know how to broach sensitive topics. Parents can engage in conversation with their children often and stress that the doors of communication are always open.

- Teens should be made aware that cyberbullying is a very real occurrence and is not just other kids "having fun" or "joking." If it's repetitive and hurtful, it should be addressed.

- Parents can monitor and limit their children's personal accounts. Some smartphone and tablet applications can be mirrored on the main account, enabling parents to see text or video messages.

- A laptop, desktop or smartphone should be placed in a shared space so it can be monitored.

- When online, children should be advised not to share personal information. Children should be urged to keep passwords secret and to never give information such as birthdays, phone numbers and addresses to people who aren't close friends. Friend lists should be restricted to only those people students interact with frequently to minimize the chance for bullying or other inappropriate behavior.

- Teens should keep evidence of any bullying and may benefit from talking with a counselor.

Smartboard Technology!

Fostering a love of the arts

Time and again research has proven the benefits of music education. Children who study music typically score better on standardized testing and exhibit improved language and reasoning skills, and music education helps students with advanced mathematics lessons by improving their spatial and temporal reasoning. Involvement in music and the arts can improve a student's SAT scores and make the student well-rounded.

Despite these benefits, music and art education is slowly disappearing from the classroom. At many schools across the nation, stages are dark and band and chorus rooms are empty. Budget cuts have been unkind to music education programs. To keep up with the demand for technology in the classroom, certain school programs have to be scaled back, and art and music are generally the first to go. This leaves it up to parents to involve their kids in music and art education.

Private lessons have long been a great way for kids to learn music, and many such music coaches are former music teachers. With private lessons, kids get to benefit from working with certified instructors, and parents are happy to make music a part of their youngsters' lives.

Arts education is important, and those seeking instruction may have to look outside of school. Private instructors are available to help foster a love of the arts and mold creative, well-rounded children.

Mount Saint Mary College names interim president

Charles Frank, Chair of The Board of Trustees of Mount Saint Mary College, announced today that Dr. David A. Kennett has been selected as Interim President for a two-year term effective immediately.

Dr. Kennett joins Mount Saint Mary College from Vassar College where he has worked since 1976 and most recently served as the Elizabeth Stillman Williams Professor of Economics. He is an accomplished member of Vassar's faculty, as well as a sought after visiting professor at many colleges and universities around the world, an author of many books and papers, a frequent speaker, and a consultant providing his economic expertise to a broad range of both private and public organizations, including the U.S. Justice Department and The World Bank.

"Following a thorough vetting of interim presidential candidates, I am pleased to welcome Dr. Kennett to Mount Saint Mary College and look forward to his immediate contributions. His strong academic credentials and impressive list of experiences will be a great asset to the Mount," said Frank. "My sincere gratitude to Trustees Sister Margaret Anderson, OP and Anna Halpine for their leadership of the search process, and to all of the other members of the Mount community who helped in developing the model of attributes and characteristics we sought in a candidate at this time. The Board is pleased to have such an accomplished candidate in place prior to the start of the school year and we look forward to beginning our search committee process for a full-time president."

Kennett will be joining Mount Saint Mary College for a two-year term which will expire at the end of the 2017-2018 Academic Year. His first priority is to meet with faculty, staff, administrators and students of the Mount along with community leaders and alumnae before the start of the school year.

"I am very excited to build on the momentum of the Mount by ensuring the continuation of its high standards of academic rigor and the strong values it has always demonstrated," said Kennett. "I am deeply committed to always acting in the best interest of Mount Saint Mary College and ensuring that we create an environment that drives it forward and continues its growth."

Kennett received his Bachelors degree from the University of Sussex, England. He began his career as an economist for Unilever and Drivers Jonas, both in London, and came to Columbia University to complete his masters and doctoral degrees. He taught at Fordham University, Queens College, and Columbia before joining the Vassar College Economics Department in 1976, becoming Chair in 1984. He has served as visiting professor at the Economic University of Varna, Bulgaria, as Visiting Distinguished Professor of Economics at the Institute d'Etudes Politiques in Paris, and as a Visiting Scholar at the University of Sussex and University College London. He has served as a consultant to the United Nations, the World Bank and the OECD, as well as government agencies and municipalities within the U.S. At Vassar College, as well as Chair of Economics, he has also been Director of Asian Studies, Director of International Studies Program, and in 2009, was named Elizabeth Stillman Williams Professor of Economics.

Kennett is an accomplished author and frequent speaker on economic topics. He has authored four books and monographs to date on various economic issues around the world and numerous articles, papers, and speeches on global economic issues. While at Vassar, Dr. Kennett served on a number of committees, including: the Presidential Search Committee; International Studies Steering Committee; Faculty Appointments and Salary Committee; Priorities and Planning Committee; Faculty Compensation Committee; President's Cabinet; Faculty Athletic Advisory Committee; Faculty Policy and Conference Committee; the Task Force on Grading Standards; the Facilities Committee; and the Appeals Committee.

CITY OF NEWBURGH

Take an African American walking tour

It was always comforting to know that despite the occasional problem that would come to the fore (and be quickly taken care of, as far as we knew), for the most part we could take for granted that the water coming out of our faucets, filling our glasses and pots, was as safe as possible. Those days of innocence are over.

I thank City Manager Michael Ciaravino for his diligence; it was he who pushed forward the recognition of our water having twice the safety level (set by the EPA) of perfluorooctanesulfonic acid (PFOS), the need to remedy that scary situation, and further, to get the state to arrange for the testing of City's residents' blood to find the level of our exposure to the substance, as was done for residents of Hoosick Falls who faced the same situation.

Congratulations to Aquanetta Wright, the Ferry Godmother, chosen as one of two recipients of the 2016 Orange County Citizens Foundation's Seligmann Award. This award is presented annually to "individuals or organizations that display an unparalleled commitment to arts and culture in Orange County."

The award will be presented at the Citizens Foundation's Annual Meeting and Picnic on the Seligman Lawn, their 45th Annual Cocktail Reception, on Sept. 15 from 5 - 8 p.m. at 23 White Oak Dr., Sugar Loaf--an afternoon of fun, friendship and art.

For more information, contact Bonnie Neucall Orange County Citizens Foundation, (845) 469-9459 or bonnie@occitizensfoundation.org. Admission: $75.

MEADOW HILL

K of C sponsors 9-11 Mass of Remembrance

"The best, most beautiful, and most perfect way that we have of expressing a sweet concord of mind to each other is by music."

Jonathan Edwards

I'd love to share with you the highlight of my summer and a dream come true for me. As you know, Brooklyn is not my hometown; it belongs to the amazing Barbra Streisand.

So, you can imagine my joy when my now-Brooklyn daughter, Kimberly, said, "Now, you are going to meet the genius of that most fantastic voice and the fabulous lady in concert, at Barclays Center in Brooklyn."

I was in Heaven, as Barbra welcomed me and her loving audience into her heart and home, and for two and a half unbelievable magical hours, it was "Barbra: The Music, the Mem'ries, the Magic!"

Forgive me, I made a major blunder in my column last week stating incorrectly the prices of the wonderful Meadow Hill Reformed Church chicken barbecue on Saturday, Aug. 27, from 4 to 6 p.m., rain or shine. Bob Kinney, gentleman that he is, kindly called me to correct my mistake. Adults are $12, senior citizens age 60 and older are $10, children 5 to 12 years of age are $5, and there is no charge for children under the age of 5. So, go out and enjoy, for this old-fashioned chicken barbecue is still the best around!

Andy Bicking, Director of Public Policy for Scenic Hudson, said rehabilitation and revitalization that has been taking place all along the river has helped drive economic development and has made the river a place “where people congregate, events are happening [and] tourism is huge in the region, perhaps our largest single economic engine and people are coming to the waterfront like never before.” He said this proposal will put all of this at risk and would “forever change the way people relate to and experience the waterfront.”

Dave Conover, of the Hudson River Sloop Clearwater, warned that if this proposal were to be approved it would be difficult to overturn.

“I am confident, based on what I know of the communities...we’ll make sure that this doesn’t happen,” he said. “This river is really a national treasure.”

Randy Casale, Mayor of the City of Beacon, said he contacted the Coast Guard, urging them to hold public meeting in his city to discuss this issue. He acknowledged the sustained effort of the late Pete Seeger in bringing attention to the Hudson River and to clean it up.

Gil Piaquadio, Supervisor of the Town of Newburgh, said it is critical “to protect the quality of life for our residents and of everyone who passes through our area.” He said the river serves as a “backdrop” to many businesses, restaurants and a variety of recreational activities “all of which are at risk with this plan.”

Piaquadio said this plan would bring tears to the eyes of Henry Hudson, who described this area in 1609 as “one of natural beauty.” Piaquadio said this plan would transform the river into an industrial canal and a spill could not be contained. He said his board will soon pass a resolution opposing this plan.

Judy Kennedy, Mayor of the City of Newburgh, said “for decades now we’ve been cleaning up the river, we’ve been cleaning up the pollution and making it a habitable, hospitable place to enjoy so our cities would come back and people would be able to play and enjoy our environment.” She said we cannot let any agency make such a critically important decision about the Hudson River “that belongs to all of us...If we don’t stand together we’re going to get run over. Let’s figure out how we are going to contain this situation and make sure we are all of one accord.”

Rob Rolison, Mayor of the City of Poughkeepsie, said it was good to see such bi-partisan efforts being made to bring attention to this controversial proposal.

“The Hudson River is not a partisan issue, it’s a community issue [and] is an issue of life for us,” he said. “We’ve been moving forward for a long time and we have to stay exactly as we have been and we are only going to get stronger... We will work together to oppose these anchorages and tell the Coast Guard someplace else, not here.”

If the Coast Guard proposal is approved there will be five large barges anchored off of Long Dock Park in Beacon.

'Turn the district teal' volunteers needed

Volunteers are needed to "Turn the District Teal"! Each year, Meadow Hill Physical Education Teacher Elissa Dickinson, along with a handful of volunteers, work to turn the district teal in support of ovarian cancer awareness.

Dickinson was diagnosed with Stage

1 ovarian cancer in 2009 while in her early twenties. Since her battle, she has become an avid supporter of raising awareness about ovarian cancer in her community. Volunteers are asked to report to the NFA Main Campus at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, August 30.

Academy Field sports a new look

Workers were busy laying down the new turf at the Newburgh Free Academy athletic field recently.

By BOND BRUNGARD
sports@tnewspapers.com

When the Newburgh Free Academy Goldbacks started football practice last week they did so with nice accoutrement in the middle of Academy Field.

The giant "N" that is centerpiece of the field is now outlined in gold as part of the lush new acre of Field Turf that was installed during the first half of this month.

The community financed the first installation of artificial turf in 2008, and during the last eight years the surface has been used for gym classes, football practice and games along with occasional boys and girls varsity soccer matches.

The field was also used on an unauthorized basis by the public, and the turf wore out faster than expected.

Last week crews, with load after load of rubber pellets, seeded the new surface, which is expected to last 15 years and cost $545,000.

Drainage and a new scoreboard were part of the project eight years ago, so those necessities were already in place during the installation of the new surface. The new surface is expected to be well maintained and guarded at night, so the public no longer uses it for after hours recreation.

"I think it will be a positive (experience) for everyone that uses it" said Bill Bianco, Newburgh's football coach, "and I know the kids are excited to get out there and start participating on it."

There will also be nets installed at each end of the field for lacrosse as the district works to improve the he boys and girls lacrosse teams, squads that have collectively won few games for many years.

"This will get a lot of use," said Jason

Semo, Newburgh's athletic director. "Now it becomes the primary field for boys and girls lacrosse."
