After running a contentious campaign that saw the now president-elect questioning the legitimacy of the election system, threatening to jail his opponent, considering enacting religious tests for people seeking to enter the country and criticizing international climate, trade and defense pacts, Donald J. Trump won the U.S. presidency against Hillary Clinton on Tuesday night.

By about 9 p.m. — after many participants had left to return home — Cecil and Rubin stayed behind hoping their candidate Hillary Clinton could still pull out a narrow victory over Republican Donald Trump. It was not to be. With victories in crucial swing states Florida and North Carolina and stunning rebukes in traditional Democratic strongholds Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Michigan, Trump pulled off one of the most unpredictable upsets in American presidential election history. "I didn't think this was legitimately possible," Cecil said. "I had more faith in the American people."

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) Hershey has come to the rescue of a college student who had his Kit Kat bar brazenly stolen.

Kansas State University student Hunter Jobbins told The Wichita Eagle he left his car unlocked with a Kit Kat in the cup holder last month before running into his dorm building. When he came back, the candy bar had been replaced with a note. The thief wrote, "I love Kit Kats so I checked your door and it was unlocked. Did not take anything other than the Kit Kat. I am sorry and hungry."

Jobbins' picture of the note went viral on Twitter, and Hershey responded by sending a representative to the campus with 6,500 Kit Kat bars.

Jobbins stuffed the bars in his car and handed them out around campus last week.

The third time might be the charm for Lewis County Fire District 3 and its efforts to replace the aging and cramped main station. The Mossyrock fire district's third bid to pass a bond to replace its station is passing with 61.74 percent of the vote, according to updated results released Wednesday by the Lewis County Auditor's Office. Fire District Chief Doug Fosburg said Tuesday he was cau-

STEADY: Inslee, Murray Vanquish Republican Opponents as Both Parties Maintain Pre-Election Power

By Rachel La Corte

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — As the nation elected a political outsider to the presidency, Washington voters stuck with the power structure they knew, easily re-electing Democratic Gov. Jay Inslee and U.S. Sen. Patty Murray and seeming to maintain the current balance of power in the Legisla-

Inslee and lawmakers next year are tasked with solving a problem that has vexed them for years: complying with a 2012 Supreme Court ruling that found the state was not meeting its constitutional obligations on K-12

The state Supreme Court ruled last month that the state has until Sept. 1, 2018, to fully fund education. But that the details of how to do that — as well as how lawmakers will pay for it — must be in place before the Legislature adjourns next year.

All 98 seats in the House were up for election Tuesday, and 26 of the Senate's 49 seats were also being decided by voters.

Volunteers get instructions for canvassing neighborhoods, Friday, following a getout-the-vote rally at a campaign office in Seattle. More than a million Washingtonians had already cast their ballots in advance of Tuesday's election, as voters decided on federal and state races, as well as ballot initiatives.

Democrats currently hold a 50-48 advantage in the House, but returns showed them possibly picking up an additional two seats.

House Majority Leader Pat Sullivan, a Democrat from Covington, noted that a bipartisan task force has already been working to address the issue, and that lawmakers were on a path to figure out the education funding issue regardless of how the legislative elections shook out.

"The breakdown is pretty much the same, and the issue is the same," he said.

Republican Sen. Linda Evans Parlette, of Wenatchee, who is retiring from the Senate at the end of the year, said that to solve a problem of this magnitude, "it's going to take everyone to work together."

"I still think balanced government is best," she said.

Both Jayapal and Walkinshaw are state lawmakers and Democrats. The 7th District includes most of Seattle, and it had been represented by McDermott since 1988.

Washington's nine other U.S. House members all won re-election, including Jaime Herrera Beutler, who cruised past Democrat Jim Moeller for re-election.

Three of the state Supreme Court's nine justices also faced re-election challenges. Chief Justice Barbara Madsen faced Kittitas County Prosecutor Greg Zempel, Justice Charlie Wiggins faced Federal Way Municipal Judge Dave Larson, and Justice Mary Yu faced Gonzaga University law professor David DeWolf. All three incumbents won reelection.

There were also six initiatives on the ballot, including measures related to increasing the statewide minimum wage, campaign finance reform and a carbon tax. The minimum wage measure passed, but the carbon tax measure was defeated and the campaign finance reform measure was losing in early returns. A separate ballot measure in Olympia that would create a personal income tax on the city's highest earners was losing in early results Tuesday night.

A majority of Washington voters also voted for Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton, who lost the national election to

The nation's first state ballot measure to impose a carbon tax on fossil fuels failed Tuesday on a crowded slate of statewide initiatives in Washington.

Control of Legislature Looks to Remain Split Between Republicans and Democrats

By Melissa Santos

The News Tribune

Washington state looks like it will be in for more years of a divided state government, despite early results that left some legislative races too close to call.

Washington's Legislature appeared remain between the parties Tuesday, as early election results showed Democrats retaining their hold on the state House and Republicans looking as if they would successfully defend their conservative majority in the state Senate.

Continued division at the Capitol would set the stage for another contentious year in 2017, when lawmakers are under a court order to finalize a plan to fully fund public schools.

Lawmakers have been unable to come up with a plan to solve school-funding problems outlined in the McCleary case and have a mandate from the state Supreme Court to finish the job by 2018.

In recent years, split control at the Capitol has forestalled Democratic proposals to impose new taxes on capital gains prolonging budget debates in which Republicans have sought to boost public-school funding without new revenue sources.

Tuesday's election results didn't look as if they'd give either party much of an edge in that debate, even as some races in the state House remained close.

Democrats appeared to gain at least one seat in the House, as well as in the Senate, but without changing the majority in either

If Tuesday's results hold, Republicans would control the Senate 25-24, with the aid of one maverick Democrat, Tim Sheldon of Potlatch, who caucuses with the GOP. Meanwhile, Democrats would increase their House majority to at least 51-47.

Democrats think they may pick up additional seats as well in races that were too close to call Tuesday night, said state Rep. Joe Fitzgibbon, D-Seattle, who is the chairman of the House Democratic Campaign Committee. Those potential Democratic pickups included two close battles with Republican incumbents in King County's 5th Legislative District, he said.

The only question now is how much we'll gain," Fitzgibbon said Tuesday.

Republicans, meanwhile, said enough races were close Tuesday night that Republicans could come back and possibly create and carbon emissions, while a 49-49 tie in the state House, would indicate that."

which would force a power-sharing arrangement in the Legislature's lower chamber that last existed from 1999 to 2001.

That would require a reversal of Republican fortunes in the 30th Legislative District, where two incumbent Republicans were losing to Democratic challengers Tuesday.

In the suburban district, which includes Federal Way, Algona, Pacific, Milton, Auburn and Des Moines, Republican state Rep. Teri Hickel of Federal Way was behind Democrat Kristine Reeves, a former staffer for U.S. Sen. Patty Murray who now works for the state Department

Meanwhile, Republican state Rep. Linda Kochmar of Federal Way was falling to Democratic challenger Mike Pellicciotti, an assistant attorney general and former King County deputy prosecutor.

State Rep. J.T. Wilcox, R-Yelm and co-chairman of the House Republican Organizational Committee, said he suspects Hickel may come back and win. Republicans also could pick up a seat in the 19th Legislative District, where Democrat Teresa Purcell had only a slight lead over Republican Jim Walsh in early returns, he said.

"It didn't used to be true, but Republican votes come in late," Wilcox said Tuesday. "History

Also on Tuesday, Republicans laid claim to an open seat in the 31st District, which includes Auburn, Edgewood, Sumner, Lake Tapps, Bonney Lake, Enumclaw, Buckley, South Prairie, Wilkeson and Carbonado.

In the right-leaning district, former state lawmaker Phil Fortunato of Auburn was comfortably ahead of independent Democrat Lane Walthers, a longtime firefighter and captain with East Pierce Fire & Rescue.

Elsewhere in the South Sound, incumbent lawmakers were posting election-night leads.

In the 26th Legislative District, state Rep. Jesse Young, R-Gig Harbor, was defeating his former seatmate Larry Seaquist, a Democrat who was fighting to return to the Legislature after a two-year hiatus. Seaquist, a retired naval commander who served eight years in the state House, was far behind Young in early returns.

In the same district, state Rep. Michelle Caldier — the Port Orchard Republican who unseated Seaquist two years ago — was fending off Democratic challenger Randy Spitzer, who lives in Gig Harbor and is the executive director of a choral group.

Around Joint Base Lewis-McChord, Democratic state Rep. Christine Kilduff of University Place was well ahead of cratic state Rep. Tim Probst of Paul Wagemann, a Clover Park School Board member, in Pierce Rep. Lynda Wilson, R-Vancouver.

County's 28th Legislative Dis-Meanwhile, Kilduff's seatmate — state Rep. Dick Muri, R-Steilacoom — was leading Mari Leavitt, a University Place resident who serves as deputy director of Pierce County Community Connections. In the area's most-closely watched state Senate race, incumbent Republican Sen. Steve O'Ban of Tacoma was winning his re-election bid against Democrat Marisa Peloquin, a colonel in the Army Reserve.

Key Senate races elsewhere were a mixed bag.

In King County, Democrat Lisa Wellman, the managing director of a software company, was defeating incumbent state Sen. Steve Litzow, R-Mercer Island, in the 41st Legislative District, causing the Democrats to gain a seat in the Legislature's upper chamber.

In another hotly contested race, state Sen. Mark Mullet, D-Issaquah, was holding off a challenge from Rep. Chad Magendanz, R-Issaquah, in the 5th Legislative District.

It looked as if Republicans would prevail in the contest to replace retiring state Sen. Don Benton, R-Vancouver, in the 17th District. There, former Demo-Vancouver was far behind state

Edwards Leading, District 1 Race Too Close to Call for Thurston County Commission

The Thurston County Commission could be about to undergo a dramatic change.

In Thurston County Commissioner District No. 2, retired Sheriff Gary Edwards, an independent, was leading Democrat Kelsey Hulse late Tuesday with 52.5 percent of the vote.

"It really looks like our country is having an awakening, if you follow the national situation, all the way right down here to the local," Edwards told supporters at an election party at Indian Summer Golf and Country Club late Tuesday. "Anyway, I'm so excited I can hardly stand it."

If elected, Cooper's goals include improving customer service at county departments, increasing recreational opportunities in the county, reducing criminal justice costs with therapeutic courts and similar programs, and growing economic development by working with regional partners, he said.

Cooper and Hutchings said they felt optimistic that later counts would be in their favor.

This Is No Time to Gloat or Damage Public Property

As the results of Tuesday's presidential election continue to sink in, some voters are feeling jubilation and hope while others are harboring disgust, dismay and fear.

These feelings are understandable and could very well have been predicted before Republican Donald Trump was declared the victor in a stunning political upset previously unmatched in modern times. Frankly, the response would have been similar — but reversed — had Hillary Clinton won the day.

There is no shortage of opin-

ions on what the leadership of the controversial businessman turned politician will mean for our country.

Here's our two cents — this is a time for calm retrospection and understanding from both sides of the political aisle.

Trump supporters would be correct to note they had many of the same feelings of fear and dejection when Barack Obama was elected in 2008 and 2012.

That's not an excuse to ignore the concerns of those who now are expressing legitimate fear for the future. This isn't a moment to gloat, nor is it a time to mock those who wonder what this might mean for their children, neighbors and friends.

Tuesday unveiled a tectonic shift in the national electorate, bringing an outcome few predicted and therefore never fully considered before the shocking results became final in the wee hours of Wednesday morning.

The time between now and the inauguration of President-Elect Trump will be important for our country. Trump and his supporters can do a great deal to ease concerns simply by being civil and allowing a calm environment for discourse as Trump prepares to take the country in a new direction. The same goes for Democrats and progressives currently marching and protesting against the outcome. Free speech is part of what makes this country great, but it should not be confused as an excuse to damage public property or reverse the will of the people.

Those unhappy with the result must be realistic. The election is final.

Trump has defeated Hillary Clinton in what has been seen by many as a repudiation of a government that has failed a large portion of the electorate.

Trump should be granted the same ability to enact his agenda as his predecessor, who came into office with broad support for changes that were considered radical by many.

In the days and weeks ahead, be understanding of fellow citizens who took the same information and came to a different conclusion.

This election season has been brutal. The time to heal those wounds begins now, and it requires the understanding and civility of both sides.

COMMENTARY: I Was Just Thinking

The Future Changes, Both Collectively and Individually

By the time you read this, the election will be over and, hopefully, a winner will have been announced, and the population will be just as divided as it was before it began. That's to be expected.

It's certainly been the strangest election since I first voted, after being discharged from the Army in 1952. Incidentally, I voted for Eisenhower, which I probably wouldn't have done if he were running against Stevenson today. I like to say, "I used to be a Republican, but then I also used to be 15, and outgrew both conditions."

If you see things only in black and white, the recent election was a case of a crook vying against a kook, with neither side being totally honest. Those who called Hillary a crook never did say what she might have gained through her "larceny," and her supporters couldn't do much except point to the 30 to 50 instances when the kook supported both sides of a two-sided situation.

By Bill Moeller Both sides will now retrench, reposition themselves and prepare for 2020. The thing that nags at my well-being is that once there was a German kook back in the 1930s to whom no one gave a chance after he attempted a coup and failed but who later proved to be something of a bother to the rest of the entire world.

By now I'm sure you're aware that, as an ordained minister in the Universal Life Church, I sometimes officiate at weddings (quite a lot of them, in fact). It was only a little over a week ago that I found myself being moved more than at any other wedding, including the one where I officiated at my own son's remony

The location was unique: the Lewis County Jail, but I'd married couples there on at least three previous occasions. This couple was Hispanic, as were two of the previous marriages there, and that led me to an unkind, unnecessary and undeserved conclusion, for which I feel nothing but shame.

My first reaction was that this was an attempt by the groom (the inmate) to escape deportation, as was the case in at least one of the previous occasions. Deportation would have been welcome, compared with what his future holds for him. He had just received a sentence of 20 years or more in prison.

His friends and supporters are concerned, but that's not the point of my mentioning it. My purpose is to try to explain the predicament and determination of the two young lovers who now face nothing but separation until they've grown old.

The love, hope, sadness and, yes, even the joy at becoming husband and wife that they showed towards each other were frankly heart-rending. My blessing, if you want to call it that, went out to them as they stood with fingers "touching" on opposite side of the thick glass wall that separated them.

After the ceremony was complete, they slowly sank to where they were both sitting, but still "touching" fingers, then foreheads, and finally lips without a word between them. Occasionally there were quiet murmurs uttered, but I didn't know what they were, nor did I feel I should have.

I've directed and acted in enough plays to recognize bad acting when I see it. There was none of that

Then it was time. A guard came and took the documents which the groom needed to sign, returned them, and the rest of us, wife, witnesses, interpreter and I, resumed our lives.

Chronicle Showed Lack of Ethics in DLC Coverage

As a young boy, I took pride in assisting my brother to deliver The Daily Chronicle around downtown Centralia. It was a time in which the newspaper was one of the primary sources of news, and it was held in high regard.

With the advent of the internet, the paper has changed from a six days a week production to about 3 days a week, and the size of the newspaper has shrunk considerably.

But that isn't all that has changed. In recent weeks I have found that The Chronicle has begun to exhibit a lack of ethics in its discussion of Discover Lewis County, a tourism website that is owned and operated by Lewis County.

As a source of news and information, we expect The Chronicle to exhibit the gold standards in journalism of truthfulness, accuracy, objectivity, impartiality, fairness and public accountability.

But this has not been the case. In recent weeks The Chronicle has indicated that Lewis County has failed to provide information it requested, and, once received, The Chronicle has indicated that the information is either wrong or not complete.

I was surprised at their accusations, so I asked the county about the actual request for information that The Chronicle submitted. Its request, which was in March 2016, included many things, including some finan- ty cial information about DLC. Nearly all of the information was provided quite timely to The Chronicle except for one large request: The Chronicle requested all documents and emails that had the words "Discover Lewis County" in them.

This, of course, was a very large

Question Raised About Signatures on Ballots

I would like to respond to an article in The Chronicle on Oct. 29 titled "A 'Rigged' Election? Not in Lewis County, Auditor Assures."

In reference to the presidential campaign and related concerns of things being "rigged," I do not believe that Lewis County has problems with equipment and voting machines, at least in the context of the presidential election issues.

I believe the auditor has security measures in place to protect ballots and balloting as far as drop box and hacking issues. However, I do have questions and concerns with the information that is fed into the machines and how it is verified originally as explained by Auditor Larry Grove., i.e., "each ballot signature must match a signature on a previous ballot."

How does the signature prove the person signing it is a legal U.S. citizen? I know that to register to vote one must check a box certifying they are a legal U.S. citizen. How is this determined and what documents have been presented as proof?

My concerns are heightened with some reports that Washington state has a problem of voting by some who are not U.S. citizens.

Betty Hedges loved life and those who filled her life. She was an avid gardener, who eagerly shared the beauty of all she grew. She was a confidant and surrogate mom to an extended family of relatives and friends.

She grew up on a dairy farm in Gate, Wash., with her parents, Jessie Mae (Johnston) and Glen Robert Dodge and siblings, Barbara Joann (Strassel) and Anthony Morris Dodge. She graduated from Rochester High School and attended Linfield College, McMinnville, Ore. Through these early periods she made numerous life-long friends and thoroughly enjoyed the annual reunions she shared with her childhood friends.

Betty worked during World War II in Seattle as a secretary for the international loans department of the Seattle National Bank of Commerce and later as an administrative assistant for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Olympia. Betty married Theodore (Ted) Hedges Nov. 12, 1946, and like Betty's own parents, they enjoyed more than 60 years of marriage together. They raised three children, Michael Jay Hedges, Jerris Robert Hedges and Sally Jean (Hedges) Blanquez. For most of their marriage, Betty and Ted lived on a farm outside of Littlerock, Wash., where they raised Shorthorn beef cattle and intermittently a variety of other livestock. They also were known for selling fresh corn and other produce during the late summer period. Prior to retirement from the farm, they grew Christmas trees and encouraged their sale for charitable fundraising.

Betty and Ted were active in the South Union Grange for over 50 years. She was an active member of the Maytown Garden Club, often challenging her children to reluctantly participate in flower arranging. Betty and Ted were active members in the Littlerock United Methodist Church with Betty serving as the treasurer of the Church and Sunday school leader for many years. She also helped lead the Margaret K. Circle auxiliary for the church. Always willing to lend a helping hand, Betty volunteered for many years on the Littlerock School District Parent Teacher Association, including its Turkey Dinner and Cake Walk fundraisers and served as a youth leader for the local 4-H clubs, Camp Fire Girls and other groups. She regularly sought opportunities for youth groups to support elders at local nursing homes.

She was an active collector specializing in antique irons and refinishing distressed

May 15, 1921- December 9, 2015 furniture. As the farm became more physically demanding, Betty and Ted moved to Lakeside Estates in Tumwater. After Ted's passing in 2007, Betty needed additional support for her progressive dementia. She lived her final years in The Hamptons, where she continued to make friends with fellow residents and staff. She was always quick with a word of encouragement and a smile. At The Hamptons, she was an active member of the "Late Bloomers" Garden Club and continued to enjoy craft work.

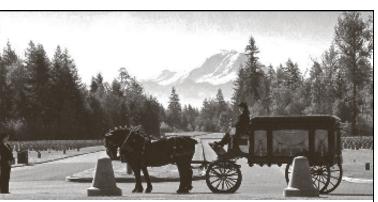

Betty was preceded in death by her parents, Jessie & Glen Dodge; sister, Joann Strassel and husband, Ted Hedges; and oldest son, Michael.

She is survived by her brother, Morris; two children, Jerris & Sally; five grandchildren, Andrew, Aaron, Emily, Bryan and William; and two greatgrandchildren, Sophia Abigail.

A memorial service is being held at the Littlerock United Methodist Church, at 1 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 17, 2016.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that those who knew Betty, provide their support to one or all of the following Littlerock United entities: Methodist Church, Littlerock, Hospice Harp Program through Providence St. Peter Hospital, Olympia and or the late Bloomers Garden Club at The Hampton, Tumwater.

The Centralia City Council approved numerous recommendations from the planning commission to change the zoning of properties as part of its annual process to update the city's Comprehensive Plan.

The changes requested came from property owners and other interested parties. A list of 15 changes were recommended by the planning commission who first held a public hearing on the matter, and then submitted its recommendations to the council.

About 53,000 homes in Thurston County are on septic systems, and those property owners could soon face a new annual fee.

Free Day at Mount Rainier to Honor Veterans

By The Chronicle

The National Park Service is waiving gate fees to parks inside Washington, including Mount Rainier, on Friday, in recognition of Veterans Day.

tional Park Service noted that the United States military has strong ties to National Parks dating back more than a century. Prior to the creation of the National Park Service, the U.S. Cavalry operated as the first park rangers at many locations around the country.

During World War II, the 10th Mountain Division conducted training exercises inside the Mount Rainier National Park boundaries and today units from Joint Base Lewis-McChord support joint training exercises and offer assistance with search and rescue missions.

In recognition of that connection, active duty military members and their dependants are always eligible to receive a free annual pass, and a free lifetime pass is available to disabled veterans. Those passes are honored at more than 2,000 national parks, wildlife MENOMONIE, Wis. — On election night, when Donald Trump claimed victory in her home state of Wisconsin, Shay Chamberlin was so excited she passed out.

Chamberlain believes Trump is her savior, sent by God to save America from ruin. She owns a women's clothing store in this remote town; her husband runs a construction company. They have two children and barely get by on $44,000 a year, living paycheck to paycheck.

In his victory speech, Trump called people like Chamberlain and her family America's "forgotten men and women" - the blue-collar workers in the manufacturing towns of the Rust Belt and the hallowing coalfields of Appalachia who propelled him to an improbable victory.

They felt left behind by progress, laughed at by the elite, and so put their faith in the billionaire businessman with a sharp tongue and short temper who promised to Make America Great Again.

LOS ANGELES - A day after Donald Trump's election to the presidency, campaign divisions appeared to widen as many thousands of demonstrators some with signs declaring "NOT MY PRESIDENT" — flooded streets across the country to protest his surprise triumph.

Flames lit up the night sky in California cities Wednesday as thousands of protesters burned a giant papier-mache Trump head in Los Angeles and started fires in Oakland intersections.

Los Angeles demonstrators also beat a Trump piñata and sprayed the Los Angeles Times building and news vans with anti-Trump profanity. One protester outside LA City Hall read a sign that simply said "this is very bad.'

Facebook readers react to "O'Rourke Holds Big Advantage in Superior Court Judge Race:"

Michael Morgan: O'Rourke was an easy choice simply by looking and campaign contributions. Gulmert refused to disclose a single dime. O'Rourke had full disclosure.

Annie Workman: So will there be a conflict of interest if/when the many criminals she's represented as a PD come to her court? Been pondering this.

Shane O'Rourke: Annie, it is a fair question, but virtually every judge in America who has practiced law will eventually encounter people that they have either prosecuted, defended or represented in some other capacity. The mere fact of having had a case with a person in the past is not an automatic conflict of interest in presiding over a case in the future, and most often it is not. With respect to her current job, Joely only represents defendants at their bail hearing. It is just as likely that she might face someone she has prosecuted as she was a prosecutor for much longer than her current job. Joely will always be fair and impartial, but if there is a defendant or other person appearing before her where there is a conflict that cannot be avoided, there are two other judges who can preside over the case. Likewise, if one of those judges has a conflict with someone, she or the other judge can preside.

Jade Keiffer: What about if/when her criminal defense attorney husband shows up in her courtroom? Hmmm.....

Shane O'Rourke: I will never have a case in front of my wife of any kind under any circumstance whatsoever. That was an issue that was discussed and resolved before Joely ever decided to run. All of my cases will be in front of the other two judges.

Facebook readers react to "Democratic U.S. Sen. Patty Murray, Gov. Jay Inslee Re-Elected:"

Clay Anderson: Yes and this state is one of the highest tax states in the union. An old friend of mine said in Washington state there are some opportunities but no prosperity. Keep it up, liberal. Soon you will run out of someone's else's money, then what?

Phillip J. Elliott: More downsliding with this group, more EPA regs. With Inslee be prepared to pay big through income tax, carbon tax and a few more. Welcome back, Hitler. He's got big union bosses's support and at very high cost. The state will now burn because Franz will make sure of that and your insurance will not get any better because re-election of Kreidler.

USERNAME: national

I voted for Johnson/Weld as voices of reason not heard from the two major candidates or many of their supporters, but with some trepidation. As long as the Libertarians advocate for abortion on demand, open borders and legalized drugs across the board, they're going to have great difficulty getting traction in a red county like this one.

to a stunning conclusion late on Nov. 8 as Trump easily surpassed the 270 electoral votes needed to win the White House in an upset that landed a body blow against the legitimacy of traditional electoral polling, which roundly predicted a Clinton victory.

Both houses of Congress were also won by Republicans, giving Trump great leverage to reverse the Affordable Care Act as well as international climate and trade deals and large portions of President Obama's legacy, much of which has been unpopular with Republicans.

In Lewis County, Trump garnered nearly 64 percent of the vote, easily beating Clinton's nearly 31 percent minority.

In local elections, Edna Fund and Bobby Jackson were elected to the Lewis County Board of County Commissioners, beating opponents Dan Keahey and Bob Bozarth, respectively.

Statewide, incumbent governor Jay Inslee beat Republican challenger Bill Bryant, receiving 56 percent of the vote.

On Trump, Jackson told The

On Trump, Jackson told The Chronicle Tuesday night he supports his victory.

"I think that Mr. Trump will make a very good president," said Jackson. "Despite some of the flamboyance, and he is an entertainer, we know that, but I believe that he surrounds himself with very smart people, and on the whole I believe this is going to be a win for our country."

Fund said she had not been paying attention to the national election Thursday night.

Lewis County Republicans chairman Mark Anders said he was happy with the national results.

"I was a bit surprised on the national level that we would take that," Anders said.

While Clinton had a narrow lead in the general vote, Trump won the electoral college map, which Anders said has helped represent the rural vote.

"Frankly, I think that's a good thing," he said. "I think it's something that was intended in the Constitution."

Lewis County for Trump campaign chairman Ron Averill, a former county commissioner, said he stayed up to watch the election until Trump gave his acceptance speech early Wednesday morning. While he was disappointed with how Republicans performed in state elections, he said he was glad to see the national results.

"We're obviously elated," he said. "... I think that basically the message is that rural America and the common working man feel that somehow they're being lost in the way the direction of the country is going and they don't like it, and they want to see change."

Lewis County Democrats chairwoman Carol Brock said she was disappointed with the results nationally, but was pleased to see Democrats do well in state races, particularly with Gov. Jay Inslee's re-election.

"I think that our saving grace is that we were able to retain Gov. Inslee," she said.

Brock said she has accepted the national results and will be working to move forward with the Democratic Party in the county.

She also voiced her concerns about a Trump presidency, including what she said is an unpresidential demeanor, the possibility of a Republican federal government undoing Democratic policies and a chilling effect on free speech.

"People are fearful of expressing their beliefs, which is very disconcerting, because our nation is supposed to be based on freedom of speech, that's one of our founding principles," Brock said.

"I have heard numerous comments from various people that they don't want to be identified, they don't want to say what they believe in ... because they're afraid."

Multiple people who were approached by The Chronicle for their thoughts on the election in Centralia on Wednesday morning declined to comment.

One man in his 20s, who only wanted to be identified by his first name, Zach, said he thought the election was largely based on people voting against,

Claribel Alvarez, 22, of Centralia, reads through the Washington State voters pamphlet prior to filling out the rest of her ballot outside the Lewis County Courthouse on Tuesday afternoon in downtown Chehalis. "It doesn't seem like a real thing. I can't believe we have allowed this to happen," he said. "The rest of the world must think we're pretty silly."

Other local people, including Brandy Ferguson, said they supported Trump and would have liked to see more Republicans elected at the state level.

"I kind of wanted to see some change," Ferguson said.

Tiffany Zwiefelhofer, who was running a flu vaccination poll outside of Centralia College on Wednesday morning, also supported Trump, but said his victory came as a surprise.

"I thought Hillary was going to win" she said to win," she said. In Washington state, Clinton won 56 percent of the vote, swinging the state's 12 electoral votes blue. This was carried largely by counties along the Interstate 5 corridor, including the Seattle metropolitan area, while the majority of counties in the state voted for Trump. This general trend was reflected nationally, as western coastal states, the Northeast and a handful of other states who swung for Clinton were overwhelmed by red states.

Trump handily won the swing state of Ohio, and scraped out victories in Florida and Pennsylvania.

In the state elections, Republicans managed to secure two positions by way of Kim Wyman as secretary of state and Duane Davidson as state treasurer. All other statewide races were won by Democrats, including incumbent Attorney General Bob Ferguson.

A host of initiatives were also considered by voters in Washington state.

Initiative 1433 was approved by 59 percent of voters, which will see the state implement a minimum wage of $13.50 an hour by 2020 and establish paid sick leave.

Initiative 1491, which would allow courts to issue extreme risk protection orders temporarily preventing access to firearms was also passed, as was Initiative 1501, which elevates identity

Two Twin Cities Players Named First-Team All-EvCo

By The Chronicle

The two Twin Cities volley-ball teams each landed a player on the first team in the Evergreen 2A Conference's 2016 All-League volleyball voting.

W.F. West's Makenzie Moore, a 5-foot-10 sophomore middle blocker, and Centralia's Kary Sathre, a 5-foot-9 senior outside hitter, were both voted to the first team.

Tumwater junior Kennedy Croft, a 5-foot-10 junior outside hitter who has committed to Gonzaga, was named the league's Most Valuable Player, and teammates Maddy Pilon and Cristina Hegarty were both first-team selections, along with the Black Hills trio of Emma Goodman, Emma Duff and Maisy Williams.

Tumwater, the Evergreen 2A Conference champion, will open play in the State 2A Volleyball Tournament Friday at 9 a.m. with a first-round match against Pullman at St. Martin's University in Lacey.

Centralia's Rachel Wilkerson was a second-team selection. Rochester's Caity Morris, Centralia's Taviana Keahey, McKenna Smith and Chelsea Petrino, and W.F. West's Jordan Crawford and Shasta Lofgren all earned honorable mention status.

The Adna Pirates girls soccer team is trying to get back to the State 1B/2B semifinals, and the journey starts today in Bremerton. Adna opens state play against Crosspoint Academy at 6:30 p.m. at Olympic High School's Silverdale Stadium.

Crosspoint is a 1B school and is part of the Sea-Tac 1B/2B league. The Warriors were 9-4-1 overall this season, but went 6-0 in league play. Crosspoint beat Friday Harbor 2-0 to earn a state berth, but lost in district championship game to La Conner, 3-1.

Adna is the top seed out of District 4, and currently 15-2 overall with a 13-1 record in league play. Adna beat Ocosta 2-0 to punch a ticket to state, then defeated Kalama 2-0 for a third consecutive district championship.

BIG, FAST: River Ridge Led by D-1 Commits at Quarterback and Running Back

By Aaron VanTuyl

avantuyl@chronline.com

The conversation on River Ridge starts with their two best skill players: running back Trey Dorfner and quarterback Kelle Sanders.

Dorfner, a 6-foot, 170-pound running back, has signed with the University of Wyoming and has run for 1,216 yards and 24 touchdowns this season, while Sanders stands 6-4, clocks in at 220 pounds and has hit 63 of 115 passes for 1,117 yards and 13 touchdowns. He's committed to Washington State University — as a defensive end.

They'll lead a Hawk offense averaging 44 points a game against W.F. West on Saturday night in the first round of the State 2A football playoffs.

"They're probably the two fastest guys we'll play all year," Bearcat coach Bob Wollan said, before adding in wide receiver Josh Braverman — the state 300-meter hurdle champ a year ago. "They've got a whole bunch of people faster than anybody we've got. It's a good team, and they've got a line to go with it." It's a daunting task, to say the least. The teams haven't played since 2013, the year before River Ridge left the Evergreen 2A Conference to join the South Puget Sound 2A League. The Hawks have been to the state playoffs every year since, but haven't made it past the first round since 1998.

"We haven't played River Ridge in a few years, but this is far and away the best River Ridge team we've ever played," Wollan said.

River Ridge, boasting an 8-1 record and No. 7 ranking in the state poll, is coming off of a 59-13 blowout of Lindberg in the crossover round. The Hawks' only loss of the season was to Franklin Pierce, 28-27, two weeks ago on a Hail Mary with the South Puget Sound 2A League title on the line.

There's more to their success than the big-name skill players, Wollan noted. Caleb Price, a 6-5, 330-pound center and nose tackle, anchors both lines,

MATT BAIDE / mbaide@chronline.com

By The Chronicle

Napavine coach Josh Fay sees the Tigers' first-round State 2B playoff matchup with Kalama as one of the more interesting games on the bracket.

It's a bit of a surprise, seeing as how Napavine's the topranked team in the state and Kalama enters the game with a modest 7-3 record — the worst loss of which came back on Sept. 9, 49-6, to Napavine.

Which is all to say the Tigers aren't taking their first-round opponent lightly — despite the fact that Napavine hasn't lost a first-round state game with any of the current Tigers on the roster.

"What's important for our guys is they understand that the ride could be over Friday night," Fay said. "They know what finality looks like. ... The best opponent we're going to play is the one we're going to play this week."

The Chinooks have won seven of their last eight games, with junior wide receiver Jacob Herz providing most of the offensive highlights. Herz had 46 rushing yards and 93 receiving yards, with two touchdowns, in Kalama's crossover win over Rainier.

"I think their offense really goes through him in a lot of ways," Fay said. "He's a pretty special athlete, elusive in the flanked by 270-pound tackles. Throw in Sanders and Jordan Tipper-Brown — also 6-4, 220 at the defensive ends, and the Hawks are an imposing squad.

"It's a team that looks to me like it's built for the long haul," Wollan said. "That's the challenge facing us."

The Bearcats (9-1) are in the state playoffs for the fourth year in a row, and coming off a tight 7-6 crossover win at Columbia River.

"Last week was pretty frustrating, offensively. We had some opportunities to score and made mistakes with turnovers, penalties, and things we can't do this week," Wollan said. "But we're looking forward to the opportunity, and that's all you want, is a shot."

W.F. West and River Ridge will kick off at 6 p.m. Saturday night at South Sound Stadium in Lacey. The winner will face either Steilacoom or Liberty in the state quarterfinals.

Note: Wollan said senior offensive lineman Brayden Bennett, who was injured back on Oct. 21 against Centralia, is likely to return to the lineup this week, though star running back Austin Emery was injured in the Columbia River win and is questionable for Saturday's game.

following the district tournament. "They will come back from it and work hard at state and hopefully have a successful run at state.'

Dailey noted the coaches and players each identified areas the teams needed to improve upon before state, and have come up with a practice plan to work on before the tournament.

Mossyrock, the No. 3 seed out of District 4, faces Darrington in the first round at 11:30 a.m. on Court 1. Darrington, out of the Northwest 1B/2B League, was 13-5 overall and 10-2 in league play. The Loggers lost in the Bi-District championship game, but bounced back in a loser out, winner to state game with a 3-1 win over Friday Harbor.

"I don't know a whole lot about Darrington, but no matter who we're playing, they made it to state, so they've got to be a good team," Nelson said. "Our expectation is to be well prepared and play our game. We don't worry too much about our opponents.

Huskies Signs Nation's No. 2 Recruiting Class

SEATTLE (TNS) — The Washington Huskies men's basketball team signed one of the nation's most highly regarded recruiting classes on Wednesday. It includes five players. The headliner is five-star, 6-foot-9 Nathan Hale High School forward Michael Porter Jr., the son of UW assistant Michael Porter Sr. Guards Jaylen Nowell and Daejon Davis, a pair of fourstar recruits from Garfield High School, also will stay home to play their college ball.

Blake Harris, a point guard from Raleigh, North Carolina, signed his letter Wednesday, as did 6-foot-9 forward Mamoudou Diarra, a Mali native who plays for St. Louis Christian Academy.

"This is a group that will complement the rest of our team and fill needs that we are missing while reinforcing other positions," UW coach Lorenzo Romar said in a statement. "This class will join a talented team with an extensive amount of collegiate playing experience and will give us as complete of a roster that we've had in the 15 years that we've been here. It also gives us three consecutive years of high-level recruiting, which was much needed due to the fact that we had to start over in terms of filling our roster. ... This gives us an extremely solid foundation to move forward and continue to build our program."

Porter is considered a consensus top-five recruit in the 2017 class, and is projected as a first-round pick in the 2017 NBA draft. Romar hired his father, a longtime friend, as an assistant coach in May.

speed." Sophomore quarterback Alex Dyer hit on 14 of 27 passes for 197 yards and three touchdowns in the Rainier win, and Corbyn Byrnes had three touchdowns — two receiving and one on the ground — last week.

"They want to try to spread us out with some shoot and empty sets," Fay said. "They do a have a couple other running sets they get in, but they're pretty balanced. They're a perimeter team; they want to throw the ball, and in a lot of ways a lot like us."

Napavine's offense has been balanced, outside of senior quarterback Wyatt Stanley. The reigning 2B co-Player of the Year has thrown for 2,248 yards and 34 touchdowns, completing 134 of 211 pass attempts and running for 330 yards and six touchdowns. Senior Mac Fagerness has 680 receiving yards and 11 touchdowns, while junior Jordan Purvis has 429 yards and 10 touchdowns.

The Tigers and Chinooks kick off at 7 p.m. Friday night in Centralia, with the winner moving on to the state quarterfinals to face either Mabton or Pe Ell-Willapa Valley.

Titans Prepare For Mabton in First Round of State

As the top seed out of the SWW 2B Football League, Pe Ell-Willapa Valley faces Mabton at 2 p.m. at Tiger Stadium in Centralia on Saturday.

Mabton, for anyone unfamiliar with Eastern Washington, is a town of about 2,200 people, located about 45 minutes south of Yakima. Titan coach Josh Fluke said he's heard of Mabton, but couldn't say he'd ever never been to the town. "We did get a bunch of film, we definitely have way more size than they do. They have a lot of speed," Fluke said. "Their quarterback looks good. He's quick and has a heck of an arm."

Even with the passing threat of Mabton junior quarterback Ventura Rodriguez, Fluke noted the team will be playing defense as usual against the Vikings.

"We worked on our pass defense, and are still working on it," Fluke said. "It's going to be the same. We're going to be aggressive up front with not much change on defense."

On offense, the focal point will once again be senior running back Kaelin Jurek (1,535 yards, 28 touchdowns). But the Titans will adapt as the defense adjusts to try to stop the workhorse back.

'We're going to start out with Jurek like we always do and once they start keying like a lot of kids too, we'll try other guys to get outside with them," Fluke said. "Jurek will be a key on our offense once again."

Mabton (5-5 overall) went 3-4 in the 1B/2B Eastern Washington League, but Fluke said a team's record doesn't matter at this point. "Once you get past the crossovers, every team has a potential to win," Fluke said. "A lot of things that happen in playoffs, some kids step their games up in the playoffs. They step it up a little more, play harder football.

I think it could be anybody's ball

Luckily for PWV, they had the luxury of playing in the tough Coastal Division, as well as some tough non-divisional games, to prepare for the tough competition they will face at game."

"There are some tough teams, three of us in it right now (from the Mountain Division)," Fluke said. "A lot of people said this league was kind of weak. It's prepared us with tough games early with Adna, Toledo and Mossyrock.'

Toledo Faces Familiar Foe in First Round

The No. 2-ranked Toledo Indians face a familiar test in the first round of the State 2B football playoffs, taking on Ilwaco Saturday at 5 p.m. at Tiger Stadium in Centralia.

Toledo and Ilwaco played back on Sept. 9, a home game for the Indians which Toledo won 42-13.

Toledo coach Jeremy Thibault, however, won't be following the same script this time around.

'They are obviously going to have to do something different to beat us. We can't think they will come out and do the same thing," Thibault said. "We look at them as a different team, basically. We are preparing for some type of craziness.' offense Ilwaco's through senior quarterback Jack Odneal and senior running back Alec Bell. The Fishermen may try something different, but Thibault said the team's defensive game plan won't change. "We make people adjust around our defense," Thibault

It's a fair statement, considering that defense allowed just six points in the first meeting before the JV defense stepped in.

The Indians don't have any plans to change their offense, ei-

"All we really do is spread the ball out and feed whoever gets excited and starts to run well, Thibault said. "We don't try to get everyone involved. Whoever is hot, whatever they are giving us, we're taking it."

Thibault noted senior tight end Gabe Fuentes — who was out with an injury from weeks 2 to 8 — and the rest of the seniors lead the team, and have helped motivate the players for Saturday's winner-stays-alive contest.

Toledo reached the state playoffs for the third year in a row with a 43-14 crossover win against Onalaska last week, though the Loggers led 6-0 after their first possession.

"We are traditionally slow starters anyways," Thibault said. "We expected Onalaska to do what they did. We had a play where the linebackers stepped the wrong way and the kid went for 50 (yards).'

Sitting at No. 2 in the polls with an undefeated 10-0 record coming into this game, there's no reason for Thibault to change the offense or defense. And playing on the turf at Centralia's Tiger Stadium — Thibault's alma mater, coincidentally — makes the Indians even better.

"It makes us a lot faster, makes everyone faster," Thibault said. "They have great facilities. We've been practicing there and it's been beneficial towards us."

Football Just Part Of Equation For Washington's Azeem Victor

SEATTLE (AP) — Already the starting middle linebacker for the No. 4 team in the country, Azeem Victor is trying to do

Victor's goals go beyond what he's doing on the field for Washington and what he's doing in getting his education. In Victor's case, doing more means being philanthropic and starting a foundation while he's still a college student and football player, in the hopes of keeping kids from making some of the mistakes he made that nearly cost him a chance at college.

"I always wanted to do something to give back ... for kids," Victor said. "Pretty much to give back, spread life and spread growth and keep the kids safe."

So while Victor has been steadily improving as one of the top linebackers in the Pac-12, he's also been creating the "Azeem Dream Foundation." His target audience is middle schoolage kids, hoping to reach out and influence them before habits can get formed — like the ones that nearly kept Victor from finding his way to college.

It's an ambitious project for a college student to tackle and one still in its infancy. But with help from his grandmother and Washington's compliance office, Victor has created a base for trying to make a difference.

"It took a long time. It was a long process," Victor said. "Did a lot of research and my grandma is the CEO of her own business so she pretty much taught me the whole way. She laid out a map for me and I just knew what I wanted to do with it."

In this Sept. 3, 2016, file photo, Washington's Azeem Victor reacts to a play against Rutgers in the first half of an NCAA college football game, in Seattle. In the midst of being the starting middle linebacker for the No. 4 team in the country, Azeem Victor is trying to do more. Victor's goals go beyond what he's doing on the field for Washington and what he's doing in getting his education. In Victor's case, doing more means starting a foundation while a college student and football player.

to him because of how close he was to missing out on college. It wasn't until his final two years of high school that Victor — a native of Compton, California realized he needed to change if his football potential was to lead to a college opportunity. That included online classes and tutoring in order to meet the requirements for being a qualified college applicant.

On the field, Victor is one of the top linebackers in the Pac-12. At 6-foot-2, 230 pounds, he's a prototypical inside linebacker and is rated as one of the top NFL prospects whether he detion is to make sure those sixth, cides to enter the draft after his junior season or play out his final year with the Huskies. Two weeks ago, he earned Pac-12 and national defensive player of the week awards after recording 16 "He said, 'I want to catch kids tackles in the Huskies' win over who are young enough to shift Utah, but he didn't earn team de-conduct penalty.

"It's not something you can just talk about and they get. It's like everything: You work through it and you're trying to improve on that," Washington coach Chris Petersen said. "Some guys, just how they're wired, it's going to be more challenging than others. So I do think he pays much closer attention to it, and I think we're making progress, but those are critical situa-

Victor had to work extensively with Washington's compliance office to make sure no NCAA rules were being violated in creating the structure of the foundation. There was communication with both the Pac-12 and NCAA compliance liaisons to vet Victor's intentions and any fundraisers must be cleared through the Washington compliance staff.

Bell handles many of the logistics, especially during football season. But Bell always makes time on Saturdays — and the occasional weekday - to make sure she can see her grandson play. Usually she wants to be alone to watch his games because she can't help but remember what Victor overcame to get to this point and what he hopes to help kids avoid in the future.

'When I see Azeem on TV, the first thing I do is I say, 'Where's my tissue box?" Bell said. "I keep saying this, but they kept saying we couldn't do it. Look at this miracle running around that field. Look at him.'

Huskies Move Up One Spot To No. 4 In Latest College Football Playoff Rankings

By Christian Caple

The News Tribune

The undefeated Washington Huskies moved up to No. 4 in the updated College Football Playoff rankings released Tuesday. And they have an opportunity this weekend to further impress the CFP com-

UW's ascension marks a pleasant end to a week of relative consternation for Huskies fans. When the CFP unveiled its first rankings of the season, Texas A&M occupied the No. 4 spot despite having one loss. Washington (9-0) was No. 5. After the Aggies lost at Mississippi State on Saturday and the Huskies ripped California 66-27, it seemed logical that UW would move up to No. 4.

There was some speculation, though, that Ohio State, which debuted at No. 6, would move ahead of the Huskies as a result of the Buckeyes' 62-3 pasting of then-No. 10 Nebraska (the Cornhuskers dropped to No. 19 this week). Ohio State's one loss this season came on Oct. 22 at Penn State, which debuted at No. 12 in the CFP rankings and moved to No. 10 this week. But the CFP committee instead chose to elevate Washington and placed Ohio State at No. 5.

Each of the top three teams -- No. 1 Alabama, No. 2 Clemson and No. 3 Michigan -- is also unbeaten.

CFP committee chairman Kirby Hocutt, the Texas Tech athletic director, said last week that Texas A&M was ranked ahead of Washington because the Aggies have played a stronger schedule. Some thought the same thinking might be applied this week in regard to Ohio State, which also has victories over No. 7 Wisconsin and No. 11 Oklahoma.

Now In Thick Of The Pac-12 Title Race, The WSU Cougars Hope To Make November A Month To Remember

By Stefanie Loh

The Seattle Times

Oh, what a difference two months can make.

In the wee hours of Sept. 11, Washington State arrived home in Pullman fresh off a threepoint loss to Boise State, 0-2 on the season, with head coach Mike Leach irate and — perhaps mentally formulating the nowinfamous speech that he would unleash the next day questioning the Cougars' toughness and likening his squad to a junior college softball team.

The team isn't at all surprised by how well it's rebounded after the 0-2 start, says senior receiver Gabe Marks.

Even when we were 0-2, we didn't lose any self-belief in ourselves," Marks said Monday. "We lost belief in (the media) because (the media) lost belief in us. We all knew that we were going to be good. It's just, a lot of people jumped off the wagon real quick. Which is OK. 0-2, fans will be

ISU's Kramer Can't Wait to See EWU's Cooper Kupp Graduate

The Spokesman-Review

Idaho State football coach Mike Kramer has a sense of humor that can't be suppressed.

On Wednesday, Kramer appreciated the bright side of interminable bus rides, the Bengals' 2-7 record and even the prospect of facing Cooper Kupp and Eastern Washington's prolific offense on Saturday.

"I've been calling it Cooper Kupp week," said Kramer, who coached at Eastern from 1994-99. 'I think they should rename their stadium. "In fact I'm ready to call this the 'Cooper Kupp Conference' — I'm gonna see if I can bring that up next spring.'

Until then, Kramer says he'd like to "present him (Kupp) with a rocking chair and say get the hell out of here."

On the subject of travel in the budge-conscious Big Sky Conference, Kramer was even more tongue-in-cheek.

The Bengals are coming off a bus trip to Missoula — distance 726 miles, round trip — and now face a 1,148-mile journey from Pocatello to Cheney and back. The Bengals aren't alone. Last week, Portland State journeyed vis and back. This week they're thing to behold," Kramer said. going round-trip to Sacramento, which means the Vikings will have covered 2,336 miles in two weekends.

"It's the nature of the beast," said Kramer, who took mock comfort in the fact the Bengals have two days to make to Roos Field. They'll spend Thursday night in the same Missoula hotel that housed them them last weekend.

"So we have that familiarity factor," said Kramer, warming to the subject.

Tough as the bus rides are, Kramer said last month's trip to Northern Arizona was even worse, as the Bengals had to fly commercial to Phoenix before boarding buses for a 2 1/2-hour trek to Flagstaff. "We're getting a lot of frequent-flier miles," Kramer said.

Regarding the Bengals' onfield struggles, Kramer said his team took some positives from a 62-44 loss at Montana.

Eagles to Honor 12 Seniors

They vow to keep things businesslike, but emotions are sure to flow for some of the 12 EWU seniors who will play their final regular-season home game Sat-

"You definitely have a game to play ... but it's also going to be an emotional moment," said senior captain Zach Bruce. "But I do think we're going to get another game on the red."

At 8-1 overall and 6-0 in the Big Sky, the Eagles figure to get a home playoff game or two, but that won't lessen the meaning of Saturday's game.

"I just have to stay composed and enjoy the moment," said Eagles kicked a 44-yard field wide receiver Kendrick Bourne, who expects "many" family members to visit from Portland.

"I'm still trying to come up some more tickets — hopefully it's not a sellout so I can buy some," Bourne said.

The other seniors include receivers Cooper Kupp and Shaq Hill, running back Jabari Wilson,

"The seniors deserve the recognition — they've continued to lay the bricks on our foundation," coach Beau Baldwin said.

Eagles Still a Second-Half Team

Despite trailing at halftime in five of eight games this season, Eastern is 8-1 partly because the Eagles have made a habit of dominating the third quarter.

The only leads EWU has had at halftime were by the slimmest of margins — 21-14 at Cal Poly, 21-10 versus Montana, 24-17 against MSU and 22-21 at Northern Arizona when the goal with 23 seconds left in the second quarter.

However, Eastern has outscored opponents 143-41 in the third quarter; the highlights include 14-0 runs at Washington State and Northern Iowa; 35-7 against UC Davis and 21-7 versus Northern Colorado.

Eastern has a 242-91 advantight end Zach Wimberly, quar- tage in the second half, but a 161-"Forty-four points on the terback Jordan West, offensive 175 disadvantage in the first half.

He's sitting in a truck, sipping coffee and petting his well coiffed dog.

The sun is up, but barely. The fog is lifting, but begrudgingly. The heater hums. The dog scratches. So does his owner.

and hopes for a few more moments of shuteye. Perhaps he will be allowed an entire dog day of daydreams.

When the passenger side door creaks open those far fetched and meager desires were dashed as a prickly wave of cold air raced up its mangy tail and up his spine toward his full flop ears. With a yawn and a stretch the dog relents, rolls over and hops out of the rustbin pickup. Even in the midst of his mild disappointment the poocher realizes that a day on the the prowl is better than a day in a cage.

In a nearby yard a flock of pheasants mill about in their pens. Locked in their cages the birds strut and coo and flitter about. The sun filters in. So does the rain. Besides the fencing and cages the place is nearly nature incarnate. The birds grow up happy, knowing nothing else but the confines of their coops. They are fed pelleted wonder bread and medicated gatorade fluids. Time controlled lights keep the days regular and the birds shuffle together beneath their radiant

Life on the farm is everything they've ever known and it's all they can think to desire.

One day an unfamiliar truck plumes of black smoke as it chugs up the gravel lane to the nexus gateway. It beeps robotic bird-like sounds as it reverses into place.

The birds cock their heads to the side. They scratch at the ground. The driver hops out. He scratches himself as his feet hit the ground.

With a bit of finagling and the promise of bonus rations of pelleted crumbles the birds are loaded into the truck. A squeaky door slams shut. The last dusty ray of sun disappears. The birds fall silent as the engine rumbles back to life and gravel crunches beneath rolling rubber tires. down to 4.5 feet. Time stands still.

What are leaves?

The truck drives away. Given the freedom to run, or even fly, the birds stand still. They have an entire world to explore but no inclination to do so. They ponder where the next ration of wonder bread pellets and dose of gatorade water will come from. Night comes, and quick. The birds wonder what to make of their new home.

What is a forest?

The next morning they raise their heads to see the rising sun. They wander from behind their bush of cover and ponder what has become of their coddled lives on the farm.

One bird stops its motion and locks eyes with a dog. They have the same tired eyes and the same desire to be somewhere else. The bird wonders what is next. The dog wonders what is taking so Soon it is all over. The dog was curled up on his familiar passenger seat. The man is scratching in that self-contented way and dreaming of afternoon beers. The birds are in the bed of the truck. They look as though they are sleeping, but even wonder bread and gatorade will not wake them from their slumber.

It's 8:15 a.m. and the coffee is still warm. For the man with the gun, it's time to go home.

FISHIN'

A rash of unseasonably warm weather means anglers should have a few days of prime fishing coming down the pike. The sun has been shining, and more importantly, the rains parted for more than a few days, which means rivers that have been running brown should be rounding back into shape as we head nose first into the weekend.

Limited sampling on the Cowlitz River last week showed arrives at the farm. It coughs 19 boat anglers with eight adult coho in the box and 214 bank anglers with a total of 39 adult coho and two jack coho kept, along week's onslaught of rain water may have been bad for fishing but it has been good for the sil-Salmon Hatchery separator recovered 2,503 coho adults, 519 jacks, 118 Chinook adults, one jack, 116 summer-run steelhead, one winter-run steelhead and 172 cutthroat trout. River flow at Mayfield Dam on Monday was recorded at 11,300 cubic feet per second with visibility all the way

The Lewis and Kalama rivers have been popular destinations for anglers too. On the mainstem of the Lewis last week the WDFW contacted 28 anglers with one Chinook kept and one beams burning the sensitive released while the North Fork River flow at Merwin Dam is currently at about 8,110 cubic feet per second, which is about twice the long term average for the time of year.

The Columbia River reopened to coho and steelhead fishing on Nov. 5 and anglers can now keep those fish from the mouth all the way up to Pasco. The regulation change was implemented after the fishery managers determined that wild fall Chinook returning to the Snake River had cleared the Columbia River gauntlet. Those fish are listed as threatened under the federal Endangered Species Act. Anglers will be allowed to keep up to two salmonids per day, one of which may be a hatchery steelhead, through Dec. 31. However, the fishery will remain closed between Beacon Rock and Bonneville Dam.

Prospects on the Chehalis are pointed in the right direction as well as the fall rains have brought salmonids all the up into the far reaches of the system. Official data doesn't exist but anecdotal evidence says that plenty of anglers have been casting their lot on along the Chehalis and its tributaries. The next few days should provide some of the best angling opportunity before the rains return this weekend, turning the water seven different shades of chocolate milk.

HUNTIN'

The hunt for red October has come and gone but there are plenty of other questy for quarry continue in the shrouded woods and grassy meadows.

Perhaps the most popular, the general modern firearm season for elk, will ramble on in western Washington through Nov. 16.

In eastern Washington the late season modern firearm hunt for white-tailed deer will continue through Nov. 19 and modern firearm hunters in western Washington will be able to pursue black-tailed deer from Nov. 17-20. Elsewhere, a late season with 12 adults and two jack coho, archery hunt for mule deer will and eight Chinook released. Last take place from Nov. 10 through Dec. 15 in GMU 101.

Statewide black bear hunts will head for hibernation on Nov. ver run workers at the Cowlitz 15, but there are plenty of other hunting options on the wing. Duck, coot and snipe hunting continues through Jan. 29 in most areas. Goose Management Area 3, which reopened on Nov. 5, will also be open through Jan.

> Pheasant hunting in western Washington will run through Nov. 30, but shooting is allowed between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. California (valley) quail, mountain quail and northern bobwhites are also open game through Nov. 30., with no time restrictions.

Seasons for blue, ruffed and spruce forest grouse, as well as

Cougar seasons will also run through the end of the year, with the possibility of additional hunting opportunities in areas where the quotas have not been

Bobcats, fox, raccoon, cottontail rabbit and snowshoe hare are all fair game through March 15 of next year, and of course, coyotes are in the crosshairs all year

Beavers, badgers, weasels, martens, minks, muskrats and river otters can only be procured through trapping.

CLAMMIN'

Domoic acid continues to wreak havoc on the fall clam digging season. In the most recent development the WDFW has cancelled five days of razor clam digging that was scheduled for Long Beach and Twin Harbors beginning on Nov. 12.

Fishery managers are hopeful though that they will be able to reopen at least some beaches for a set of digs proposed for Nov. 17-19. Additional testing conducted in the coming week will determine the fate of those digs.

Domoic acid is a naturally occurring marine toxin that is caused by decomposing algae. The toxin can cause illness or even death if consumed in large enough quantities.

'We're off to a bit of rocky start with this fall's razor clam digs," said WDFW coastal shellfish manager Dan Ayres, in a press release. "But we'll give the green light on digs as soon as we know the clams are safe to eat."

Domoic acid levels have climbed in recent weeks along Washington's southern coast, which includes Long Beach and Twin Harbors, but toxin levels along the north coast, including Copalis and Mocrocks, have consistently met state health standards. As a result the WDFW has considered opening Mocrocks and Copalis for the proposed Nov. 17 digs.

'We're optimistic that we'll be able to open at least a few of the beaches on Nov. 17," Ayres said in the release.

Test results are expected to be in by Nov. 15. Updates and additional information can be found online at http://wdfw.wa.gov/ fishing/shellfish/razorclams/.

WILDLIFERS

The state recently approved the acquisition of large tracts of land in Cowlitz and Kittitas counties that the WDFW plans to use for the proliferation of animal habitat.

In Cowlitz County the Washington State Wildlife Commission approved the purchase of 975 acres to the north and west of Merrill Lake. The stated intent is to use that land in order to protect fish and wildlife habitat including salmon, steelhead and elk, while helping to provide access for outdoor recreation. That purchase cost $2.1 million. The commission also approved the purchase of 705 acres in Kittitas County in order to protect prime habitat for wildlife, including mule deer, elk and the northern spotted owl. The tract is located south of Cle Elum and comes at a cost of $811,000.

In a much smaller land grab, the commission approved the purchase of 2.65 acres in Wahkiakum County in order to facilitate the construction of a spawning and rearing side channel for chum salmon off of Skamokawa

Geology Lessons Offered by Huge Circle of Rock in Oregon

By Zach Urness

The (Salem) Statesman Journal

FORT ROCK, Ore. — If the United States descends into anarchy, and roving tribes of armed highwaymen rule the countryside, the place I'm going to start a new civilization is Fort Rock State Natural Area.

Actually, by this time, it would just be Fort Rock.

There would be no state parks in the smoking ruins of what once was called Oregon.

The benefits of Fort Rock as a place to reset humanity are obvious the minute you see it rising like a stone colosseum above the high desert, southeast of Bend.

An enormous circle of jagged rock wall, Fort Rock provides an excellent level of natural protection. The sagebrush prairie extending in every direction means you could see invaders coming from miles away.

A hike through the inside brings you within walls that feel both cozy and expansive, not unlike a professional baseball stadium. The towering rock pedestals, rising in gothic shapes, would make an impressive throne to sit upon while emissaries from neighboring tribes arrived to offer tribute.

Yes, this natural kingdom is the place to be after a full-blown breakdown in society.

The problem, I suppose, would be finding a reliable source of water. It's an ironic conundrum considering Fort Rock began life — and sustained some of the earliest life in North America — as an island in a gigantic prehistoric lake.

No, really.

Beginning about 2 million years ago — and occurring in cycles — melting glaciers and rain created massive bodies of water in Eastern Oregon called pluvial lakes. The largest, today known as Fort Rock Lake, was over 1,260 square miles and covered the length of the Christmas Valley, according to the Oregon Department of Geology and Mineral Industries.

About 100,000 years ago, a small eruption below the lake's surface spewed hot basalt magma up through the water, coolcame Fort Rock itself.

A pair of sagebrush bark sandals were discovered at Fort Rock Cave, about 1.5 miles from Fort Rock, by University of Oregon archaeologist Luther Cressman in 1938. They were dated to some 9,000 to 13,000 years ago and revolutionized the way we understand the development of humans on this continent.

They're still the oldest known footwear found anywhere in the world — older than anything found in Egypt or Africa, which is pretty amazing," said Joe Wanamaker, park manager at Fort Rock. "A lot of other artifacts have been discovered there as well, including spear points."

Three Salmon Derbies Kick Off Winter Marine Fishing Season With Good Results

The Seattle Times

Three salmon fishing derbies were held over the weekend, and offers a good glimpse of what is out there to catch.

The Tengu Blackmouth Derby — canceled last fall and winter due to closures — was held on Sunday and 21 members managed to reel-in three blackmouth in Elliott Bay.

"Great weather for the opener of the 71st Tengu Derby on Sunday," said Doug Hanada, president of the longstanding derby, which began in 1937 and up unsince the end of World War II.

The top fish was caught by Justin Wong that weighed 8 pounds, 11 ounces; second was his father Benny Wong with a 5 pound, 6 ounce fish; and third was Steve Nitta with a 4 pound, 14 ounce fish.

from the Elliott Bay Marina, mid-morning," Hanada said. "Lots of shaker (chinook under the 22 inch minimum size limit) action all over the bay with multiple reports of keepers lost at the boat from West Point (south of Shilshole Bay), the marina, and Duwamish Head. No reports from the Harbor Island area since there was heavy netting going on. Members reported marking bait everywhere and catching a number of squid too."

The derby will be held every Sunday from daybreak until 11 a.m. on this coming Sunday, and Nov. 20, Nov. 27, Dec. 4, Dec. 11 and Dec. 18 at the Seacrest Boathouse in West Seattle.

In the derby, only moochtil last year was held every season ing (fishing using a banana-style lead weight to a leader with a herring) is allowed. The Grady White Salmon Derby was also held on Sunday with 28 boats and 68 anglers catching nine blackmouth, and the top two fish were both caught on Possession Bar.

Top fish went to Tom Regney of Clearview with a 13 pounds, 12 ounce hatchery chinook; and second was Scott Beresford of Kenmore whose fish weighed 11 pounds, 8 ounces.

Up to the north, 564 anglers last weekend took to the water of Puget Sound for the Everett No-Coho Blackmouth Salmon Derby and reeled-in 146 hatchery

"Fishing overall was pretty good, and that is consistent from what I'm hearing all the way up to Midchannel Bank (near Port Townsend)," said Tony Floor, the director of fishing affairs for the Derby Series.

Winds blowing out of the Linc's Tackle and Outdoor Em- south were forecast at 15 to 25 porium in Seattle. For details, mph on both days, and those who found the patches of baitfish -- mainly herring schools scored the best results.

"The trick (for the first place and runner-up anglers) was they managed to find a patch of large herring near the bottom, and consistently trolled around it and managed to find the bigger fish," Floor said.

Seahawks Defense Can't Get Off The Field Since That Marathon Tie In Arizona

By Gregg Bell

The News Tribune

RENTON — Tyrod Taylor is

Tom Brady is "The Man." That's the biggest concern among a few right now for the Seahawks.

The NFC West leaders (5-2-1) are going from holding off Taylor's Buffalo Bills late for a win Monday night to facing Brady and his rolling New England Patriots (7-1) in Foxborough, Massachusetts, on Sunday night.

Yes, it's Seattle's heralded defense that's currently a bigger issue than its running game. And that's saying something. The Seahawks on Monday night gained its fewest yards rushing in a game (33) in more than five years -- with just 10 yards by its two tailbacks combined - yet still beat Buffalo, 31-25.

In January, Seattle defense became the first to lead the NFL in fewest points allowed four consecutive seasons since the 1950s Cleveland Browns. Here in November, it is getting worn down. The Seahawks allowed Buffalo a 17-play drive for the Bills' go-ahead touchdown in the first half Monday. That was the longest drive for points against Seattle since Dec. 1, 2011, when Philadelphia also marched 17 plays to score against it.

The Seahawks also allowed the Bills drives of 13 plays and 12 plays to score. They allowed the league's 24th-ranked offense 425 yards — almost 100 yards more than the Bills had been averag-

In the last two games, Seattle has allowed New Orleans and Buffalo to convert 21 of 32 third downs (66 percent). That is a prime reason the Seahawks have allowed 50 points in their last day, Seattle had allowed points the second quarter. That turned on nine consecutive drives.

If things don't change before Sunday night, Brady and the Patriots might light up Seattle more than Tyrod Taylor could ever dream to.

'We've definitely got to do a better job of getting off the backer Bobby Wagner said following their victory over Buffalo. 'Third downs are big. We've got to take care of that.

'We coming away with a win, it's always good. But there are a lot of things we can go back to (work on). Even giving up this many points — that shouldn't happen."

Wagner is doing his part. ble the Bills' usual success rate. He had a career-high 16 tackles Monday. That was one more tackle than he had the week before in the 25-20 loss at New Orleans. He also had half a sack and its 28-24 win over the Seahawks three tackles behind the line of scrimmage against the Bills.

But many other defenders did not tackle, at least not as they normally do. Even end Cliff Avril, sacks in eight games, missed a tackle with Wagner on Buffalo Into the second quarter Mon- running back LeSean McCoy in haps two more games.

He's the most elusive guy that plays in this game right now, in my opinion. And Tyrod Taylor is as hard of a guy as you can possibly play against at quarterback, to tackle.

The 800 yards, 50 points and 66 percent conversion rate on third downs the last two games have come since the grueling, 6-6 overtime Oct. 23 at Arizona. The defense played 95 snaps that night. Seattle's entire secondary played every snap of that one. Strong safety Kelcie Mc-Cray, Chancellor's replacement, played 108 snaps that night, including special teams. Wagner, cornerback Richard Sherman and many other starters needed intravenous fluids during and after that game. Sherman was shaking at his locker in Arizona and had medical personnel suggesting a stretcher for him to get to the team bus.

Buffalo, Brady finished his long drives with the two, winning touchdowns in the fourth quarter to win the title. "It's going to be corrected.

We're not going to be out there as much as we go down this (home) stretch," Wright said. "We are going to find a way to figure out how to get off the field on third down — and be a more dominant defense."

Carroll, not surprisingly, had a positive view of the all the work the defense has had to put in these last few games.

"Our defensive guys have been thru so much challenge the last month," the coach said Tuesday on his weekly day-after radio show on Seattle's KIRO AM, "they are getting stronger."

What The National Media Are Saying About Jimmy Graham's Return 'To Elite Status' And NFL Officiating

By Ed Guzman The Seattle Times

Jimmy Graham put on a stellar performance, especially in the first half. Russell Wilson seems to be looking like himself again, which is a good thing considering Seattle's sputtering running game. And despite another exhausting performance by the defense (Buffalo ran 82 plays), it pulled itself together at the end when it needed to.

And, of course, there was weirdness, namely the chaotic conclusion to the first half. The Bill had plenty to say about it, especially coach Rex Ryan.

It was such an eventful game, the return of Percy Harvin was pretty much an afterthought.

The Seahawks improved to 5-2-1 with a road game against New England looming on Sunday night. FiveThirtyEight.com is giving Seattle a 34 percent chance of winning that game.

The rest of the national media had plenty to say about the Seahawks' performance against the Bills. Below is a sampling:

Sports Illustrated's Chris Burke focused on the officiating at the end of the first half:

"There's no denying the mistakes loomed large, which is too bad. This was as entertaining a game, from start to finish, as the NFL has turned in during a disheartening regular season. We should be talking about Graham's resurgence, the mesmerizing Wilson-Taylor head-to-head, or the Seahawks' position as perhaps the NFC team best equipped to challenge Dallas. And we will, but only in addition to yet another examination of the NFL's painfully flawed officiating system."

Whether Wilson will become the running threat he has been in the past at any point this season is uncertain. But on Monday night, he showed enough mobility to take deeper drops and get out on the perimeter on bootlegs to open up plays downfield. That's why Monday night was so significant. Wilson and the offense showed signs of life, and the Seahawks are 5-2-1, alone in first place in the NFC West, and two games ahead

SportingNews.com's Vinnie Iyer was impressed by Graham's performance:

"It was a throwback to that more consistent, more dominant and healthy time of his career, but also a important fast forward for a slumping Seahawks' offense in search of a boost. With no 'Beast Mode 2? yet out of their Marshawn Lynch-less, Thomas Rawls-down rushing attack, the Seahawks have lacked matching the same physical intimidation they

Chris Wesseling of NFL.com was worried about Seattle's running game:

"As promising as this performance was for Seattle's passing game, it's easy to see that the offensive coaching staff has little confidence in a slumping ground attack. The backfield duo of Christine Michael and C.J. Prosise was sitting on zero rushing yards until Michael strolled in from three yards out for a late second-quarter touchdown. The Seahawks called just eight rushof the second-place Arizona Car- es for 10 yards, which is hardly a surprise considering Michael was afforded precious few holes to exploit for the third consecutive game. Until defenses start respecting Wilson's legs again, Seattle's running game is spinning its wheels. Michael's frustrated fantasy owners should brace for as Carroll recently suggested." CBSSports.com's Will Brinson listed the Seahawks' poor running game as one of his eight takeways from Monday's game: "The offensive line is a problem. NFL this season."

Guys can't block. The good news is Russell Wilson's a pretty talented quarterback, and managed to go 20-for-26 for 282 yards, two touchdowns and no interceptions. But this team needs to quickly figure out the offensive line situation and hope Thomas Rawls can get back within the next couple of weeks. The running game has stalled and Seattle, despite the wins and despite the spot in the standings (first), doesn't quite have the identity they would like to have."

Frank Schwab of Yahoo Sports' Shutdown Corner blog said this was a quality primetime game for the NFL:

"Well, nobody should be complaining about the quality of that prime-time NFL game. In perhaps the best game of the NFL season to date, the Seattle Seahawks and Buffalo Bills battled until the last minute, and the Seahawks finally got the stop they needed. ... The theme of this season has been the poor quality of play in prime-time games, and the effect that has had on television ratings, but Monday night's game was fantastic."

The Ringer's Danny Kelly wrote that the officiating controversy shouldn't overshadow

Graham's performance: "It's unfortunate, then that the Sherman controversies, which represent so much of what's wrong with the NFL, overshadowed the most irrefutable, thisis-why-we-love-sports development to come out of that secretly awesome game: Jimmy Graham's production following his return from a patellar tendon tear -- an Thomas Rawls' return in Week 11, injury formerly known to be a de facto death sentence for the career of a professional athlete. Graham has returned to elite status, and it's one of the most phenomenal things that has happened in the

He showed no animosity toward his former team, and debunked any rumors that he specifically chose Monday night's game in Seattle to end a brief retirement from football that began in April.

"Not at all," said Harvin, who was signed by Buffalo last Tuesday, and made his first appearance in an NFL game in more than a year.

"Everybody thought it was tension - why I wanted to do that. But everybody came out with nothing but love. We were happy to see each other."

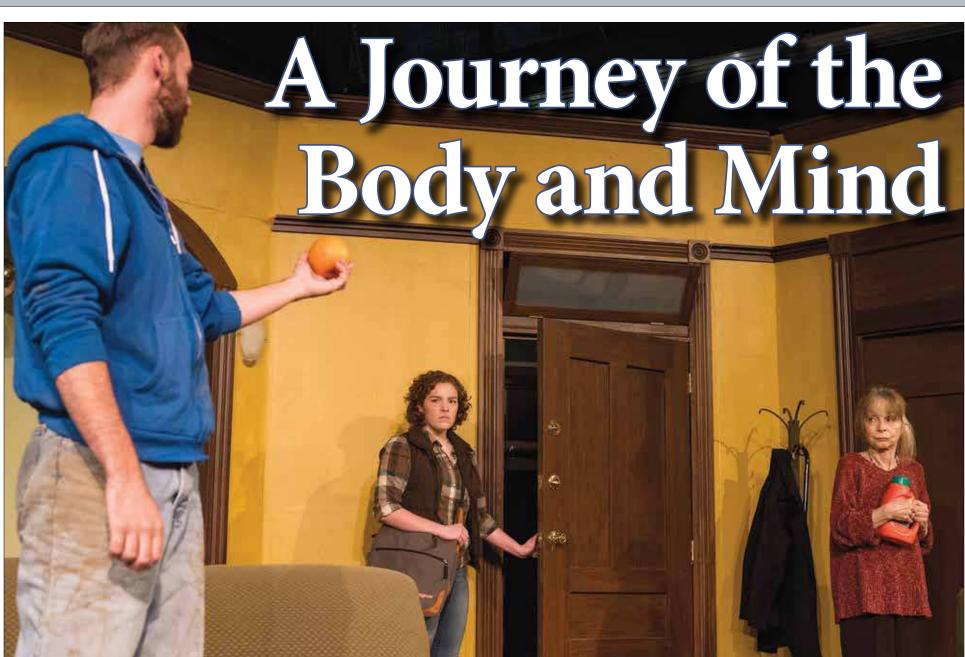

In fact, the only negative emotion the former Seahawks wide receiver appeared to show was dissatisfaction.

After patrolling the Buffalo sideline, engaged, for most of the game, he removed his helmet in frustration after Tyrod Taylor's final pass attempt fell incomplete.

Looking for Robert Woods on fourth-and-15, Taylor's pass zipped to the ground, handing Seattle a 31-25 win in front of a record-breaking crowd at CenturyLink Field. But Harvin's return to Seattle was, otherwise,

"I wanted to, first of all, keep my emotions in check," he said. "That was one of the biggest things. We had a plan. We stuck to it. I was able to get out there."

Centralia College Fall Production '4,000 Miles' Tells Tale of Love, Loss

By Carrina Stanton

For The Chronicle

An unlikely pairing and even more unlikely paths to healing are the main themes of "4,000 Miles," which opens at Centralia College Friday.

The show is the directorial

The show is the directorial debut for Emmy Kreilkamp, who took the helm of the Centralia College theater department this year. She said she was drawn to the Amy Herzog play, which was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize, by how real the story feels.

"I was struck by the language," Kreilkamp said. "The playwright depicts relationships very authentically."

The story begins with (portrayed by David Lenz) who has just completed a cross-country bike trip and lands at the Greenwich Village apartment of his feisty 91-year-old grandmother, Vera (portrayed by Nancy Tribush). The story takes place over the course of a month grandson and grandmother spend together, during which they both infuriate and bewilder each other. As they learn more about one another, they ultimately are able to forge a bond with one another.

Vera (portrayed by Nancy Tribush), right, sticks out her tongue at Leo (portrayed by David Lenz) during a rehearsal for "4,000 Miles" on Thursday, Nov. 3, at Wickstrom Theatre at Centralia College.

"So much of the play is about how we become friends with our family," Kreilkamp said. "They're both on journeys and I love journey plays. Leo is on a physical journey but also an emotional journey of grief and trying to find his way in life. Vera is one a journey of trying to

Lenz, in the role of Leo, a Centralia College graduate who recently completed a bachelor's degree in fine arts performance at the University of Idaho, said he was drawn to audition for the play because of the emotional journeys that the characters undertake. He said there is a very honest give and take between the grandson and grandmother's characters where in the course of their grief they really tear each other down but also draw each other in.

"It's a really beautiful story of dealing with loss and relationships whether it's losing them or mending them or both."

The cast of four for the play is rounded out by Bec (portrayed by Paige Flock), Leo's waning love interest, and Amanda/Lily (portrayed by Kellee Weiner), Leo's adopted sister.

Another thing that Kreilkamp said she loved about the show was the character of Vera, since it is not very common to find really compelling roles for older female actors. Tribush, in the role of Vera, has an acting record that spans back to 1958. The Rainier resident said she saw an advertisement for the show and was drawn to the character and the story.

"It's beautifully written and it's so real," Tribush said. "Everything we do in this show is right there, it's immediate. I don't have to think about acting because it's all so natural."

There is an approximately 90-minute running time for "4,000 Miles." Parents should be advised the show contains some adult language and themes as well as marijuana use.

The Centralia College fall production of "4,000 Miles" is directed by Emmy Kreilkamp, the new Centralia College professor of drama/theater. She takes over the role after the retirement of Brian Tyrrell in June. Tyrrell had led the department for 25 years.

Kreilkamp comes to Centralia from Chicago, where she had taught at city college for 15 years. She said she was interested in the job because it would allow her to both teach and direct.

"I was attracted to the fact that I could teach both the literature and theory but also the practice classes," Kreilkamp said. "I like to be able to do that but many colleges split them."

Being able to move to the Pacific Northwest was another selling point to Kreilkamp.

"I love this part of the country," Kreilkamp said. "I like its climate as well as the progressive politics."

Kreilkamp has plans to present three shows at Centralia College this season: "4,000 Miles," which opens Nov. 11; "The Odd Couple," all-female version as the winter show in February; and "Fiddler on the Roof" as the spring show. Auditions for the female version of "The Odd Couple" are planned for 3-5

Kreilkamp is married with two children and lives in Olympia. She is an avid runner who enjoys keeping bees and brewing her own beer.

Cowgirl's Dream to Perform at Bucoda Community Center

Tacoma band Cowgirl's dream will contribute its music for a benefit for the Bucoda Skookumchuck Oddfellows Lodge at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Bucoda Community Center. Starting with the time-worn tradition of western swing music, the Tacoma-based band was created with the debut of Kristi Nebel's album, DETOUR. Nebel brings her years of love in performing this music to her lead singing, with back-up harmonies and a few original songs from Steve Nebel. When recording my solo album we remained true to the tradition of western swing and found that that easily included songs composed by Johnny Mercer and Cole Porter as well as by Bob Wills and Hank Thompson," Kristi Nebel said.

She was voted among the top five female singers for the Academy of Western Artists 2014 Will Rogers Awards.

Wobble Chairs, Bouncy Balls Let Students Wiggle While They Work

By Nanette Light

The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Peek inside Jennifer Cass' second-grade classroom and you won't see kids sitting on desk chairs in neat rows.

Some gently bounce on stability balls. Others rock back and forth on plastic wobble chairs that move like spring animals on a playground. Some sit cross-legged on pillows around a low table. The rest lounge on their stomachs on plush bath mats.

Second-grader Qualyon Perkins said his favorite seat is the "bouncy ball."

"It helps me because when I get wiggly, I don't have to act crazy. I can just bounce or wobble," he said.

It's called flexible seating, and Cass is among several Hexter Elementary teachers who have converted their classrooms with hopes to improve students' focus and allow them to choose how they learn best.

The evidence isn't there yet, but the teachers say they see a difference.

"I have a lot of students who like to fidget or move while they work, and regular chairs don't allow them to do that," said Cass, who teaches math and science at the Dallas ISD school. 'Wobble chairs allow them to move around while they learn."

Cass said she ditched traditional chairs altogether after noticing most of her students last year didn't sit in them to do their work, opting instead for bean bag chairs and the floor.

"Why do I have all these desks and chairs in here if no one is using them? They don't like them, so I got rid of them," she said.

She said her students get to choose seating based on where they learn best, and there are rules for the new seats, like both feet on the ground and no spinning.

"So it's not necessarily which one is the most fun. It's where do you learn best," Cass said.

The equipment isn't cheap. A KORE wobble chair, which comes in rainbow colors, sells for nearly $70 on Amazon. According to the company, it can strengthen core muscles and the rocking motion can be calming and organizing for the brain, helping kids pay attention.

Principal Jennifer Jackson said the district didn't foot the bill for Hexter teachers. Many of them sought donations — ranging from over $600 to over $2,000 — on the nonprofit website DonorsChoose.org. More than 20 Dallas-area teachers are among roughly 3,000 pending requests from across the country on the site for flexible seating.

"As we learn more about how our minds and bodies are all connected, how it's one unit, I think we're going to see more of it," Jackson said of flexible seating.

A 2015 study by researchers at the University of California, Davis MIND Institute — an international research center that studies neurodevelopmental disorders — found that fidgeting for children with attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder may actually help them think.

"Parents and teachers shouldn't try to keep them still. Let them move while they are doing their work," Julie Schweitzer, director of the UC Davis ADHD Program and the study's senior author, said in a news release.

But as far as she knows, whether wobble chairs and other flexible seating helps hasn't been studied.

"However, it is a very ripe area for exploration," Schweitzer said in an email. She said the benefits and the costs to the child and the overall classroom environment should be tested.

Despite the lack of research, teachers say wobble chairs and bouncy balls can be helpful for students, especially those with ADHD tendencies.

While many students were excited about the new seats on the first day of school, not everyone likes to wobble or bounce.

Ella Greenman, a secondgrader in Cass' class, prefers a floor pillow to the wobble chairs and bouncy balls, saying it's easier for her to focus.

"The pillow is squishy. Sometimes it's hard to work and bounce," she said.

Caroline Harris, who teaches second-grade reading language arts and social studies at Hexter, replaced desk chairs with a classroom set of wobble stools this year after spotting them in other classrooms. But she kept a few stationary stools around a table for kids who want to stay still.

"They don't have to sit on a wobble seat," she said.

And teachers say the repetitive moving isn't for all educators. The wobble chairs have been a hurdle for substitute teachers used to stationary chairs, Harris said.

"Having someone come in who's not familiar with them and doesn't necessarily know what's going on or why we have them, that's been a challenge."

Just like the workplace has changed — think standing desks and stability balls instead of chairs — classrooms are adapting to how students work best.

"We all see the same things: kids wanting to stand or wanting to move around in their chairs," said Shannon Bowden-Veazey, a third-grade teacher at Hexter. "This gives them the opportunity to do that."

Bowden-Veazey instigated flexible seating at Hexter when she brought 13 stability balls into her classroom last year after noticing kids leaning in their desk chairs, balancing on the chairs' back legs.

She can't say for sure whether it's helped academically but said she notices students staying seated who, in the past, would roam the room.

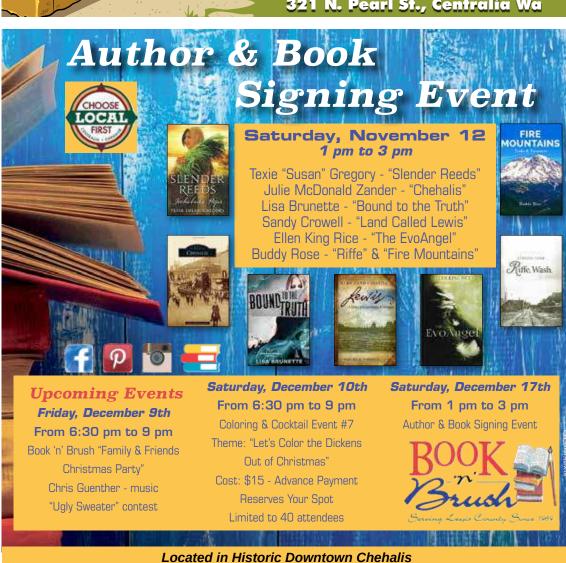

"It gives kids a different way to deal with energy or even some anxiety they're having in their lives," Bowden-Veazey said.

A teacher for more than 20 years, she's noticed kids have a harder time focusing than they did a decade ago. She blames it on a variety of factors such as technology and nutrition.

"It's gotten worse. They can't sit," Bowden-Veazey said.

Baker Boyer Bank Opens in Walla Walla on Nov. 10, 1869

Baker Boyer Bank opens for business in Walla Walla. Founded by brothers-in-law Dr. Dorsey Syng Baker (1823-1888) and John F. Boyer (1824-1897) with profits from their years as merchants servicing gold miners, Baker Boyer Bank is the first banking institution in what will become the state of Washington.

Dr. Dorsey Syng Baker was a trained physician but spent the most of his lifetime as an entrepreneur. He made several trips to the California gold fields during the 1850s, eventually settling in Oregon's Umpqua Valley where he raised cattle and operated a mill and mercantile.

John F. Boyer, a former gold miner and storekeeper, was married to Baker's sister Sarah. Baker opened a store in Walla Walla in October 1859, hiring William Stevens as manager. In 1860 Baker took over management of the store and in mid-1862 Boyer joined him in the mercantile business under the name D. S. Baker & Co. Walla Walla was a major supply point for hopeful gold miners en route to Idaho and Montana. Baker & Co. sold supplies to these miners, and also to early settlers and ranchers.

Baker and Boyer also provided miners with an informal banking service by allowing them to exchange their gold dust and nuggets for cash. The mercantile firm had a large safe in which Baker and Boyer routinely allowed miners to store their buckskin pouches of gold, and the pair developed a reputation for reliably producing the gold upon the owners' return. Predicting that banking would in the long term prove more lucrative than storekeeping, Baker and Boyer sold the mercantile business to Paine Brothers & Moore and became bankers. The mercantile building had two stories, and Baker and Boyer operated their banking business on the second

In 1889 Baker Boyer Bank received its national charter. Boyer was elected the bank's president, a position he held until his death. In 1890 Boyer erected a new building on the same site where the mercantile building had been. In May 1911 a third building was completed on the same site (7 West Main Street). The seven-story structure towered over neighboring buildings, providing local photographers with a handy perch for snapping territorial images.

Baker and Boyer were also part of a group of Walla Wallans who financed the 32-mile Walla Walla & Columbia Railroad from Wallula to Walla Walla, later part of the Northern Pacific Railroad. This enterprise occupied Baker's focus, while Boyer managed day-today operations at the bank.

In November of 1956 Baker Boyer provided Walla Walla customers with the city's first drive-through banking facility. As of 2007 Baker Boyer Bank is still family owned and oper-

Seattle Post-Intelligencer Announces Deaths From Influenza of Tess Preston McCarthy and Roy McCarthy on Nov. 10, 1918

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer announces that Seattle native Therese (Tess) Preston McCarthy and her husband Roy Mc-Carthy have died in Minneapolis, victims of the global Spanish influenza pandemic. The couple's death orphans their four young children, including sixyear-old Mary McCarthy. Years later McCarthy will movingly describe the horror of her parents' sudden demise in her 1957 memoir, Memories of a Catholic Girlhood.

The McCarthys were in the process of moving their household to Minneapolis, where Roy had grown up and where his parents still lived, when they became ill.

The party that left Seattle on the evening of Oct. 30, 1918, aboard the Northern Pacific's North Coast Limited included Tess (1888-1918), Roy (1880-1918), their children Mary (1912-1989), Kevin (b. 1914), Preston (b. 1915), Sheridan (1917-1966) and Roy's brother and sister-in-law, Harry and Zula McCarthy. Harry and Zula had traveled from Minneapolis to Seattle to help with the move. Tess and Roy Mc-Carthy's house at 934 22nd Avenue (now 22nd Avenue E) had been sold and the party spent their last days in Seattle at the

New Washington Hotel. Waving Goodbye

The report in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, under the headline "Native Daughter Dies," stated:

"Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy, with their four young children, left Seattle on Oct. 30 for Minneapolis, where they were to make their future home. On the train Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy and the children contracted Spanish influenza. Mrs. Mc-Carthy died on last Wednesday and her husband on the following day. The children are recovering. Mr. and Mrs. Preston, informed of the serious condition of their daughter, left Seattle for Minneapolis last Wednesday, but Mrs. McCarthy died before they arrived" (Nov. 10, 1918).

Mary McCarthy wrote: "One by one, we had been carried off the train which had brought us from distant Puget Sound to make a new home in Minneapolis. Waving good-by in the Seattle depot, we had not known that we had carried the flu with us into our drawing rooms, along with the presents and the flowers, but, one after another, we had been struck down as the train proceeded eastward. We children did not understand whether the chattering of our teeth and Mama's lying torpid in the berth were not somehow part of the trip ... on the platform in Minneapolis, there were stretchers, a wheel chair, redcaps, distraught officials" (Memories... p. 34).

Battling Influenza

The need for ambulances to meet incoming public transportation and carry away flu victims was woefully familiar to Seattleites who, like the majority of other communities in the United States and throughout the world, were in the midst of their own public-health battle with the disease. On Nov. 6, for example, as the McCarthys lay dying in Minneapolis, The Seattle Star reported that when the Alaskan steamer Victoria docked in Seattle the night before, it was met by 17 ambulances. Of the 700 aboard, 153 came down with influenza en route from Nome.

Influenza is characterized by a rapid onset and high fever. Fatalities result from pulmonary edema (the collection of fluid in the lungs) or from secondary infections from bacterial pneumonia. The 1918-1919 influenza pandemic targeted primarily young adults between the ages of 20 and 35.

The 1918 Pandemic

At least 21 million people worldwide died of influenza during the 1918-1919 pandemic, some 700,000 in the United States and 1,600 of these in Seattle. On Oct. 29, 1918, Seattle

Tess Preston and Roy McCarthy before their marriage, Oregon, 1911.

gauze masks mandatory while in public, and on Oct. 30 the requirement was extended state-

In attempt to prevent the spread of the disease, public gatherings in Seattle were banned. Public gatherings were also banned in Minneapolis, the McCarthy family's destination. By the time the influenza had receded from Minnesota, that state had recorded nearly 12,000 deaths, Tess and Roy McCarthy's among them.

Two Deaths, Four Orphans

Carol Gelderman, one of Mary McCarthy's biographers, states in Mary McCarthy: A Life that Tess McCarthy had already been taken ill with influenza several weeks before the family left Seattle. According to Gelderman, Tess became ill on Oct. 7, 1918, and was hospitalized on Oct. 11. (It seems probable that this illness was actually something other than influenza, which tends to exert its effects more rapidly than the recorded course of Tess's Oct. 7 illness would indicate.) Mary was recovering from chicken pox, and her three brothers developed that disease in quick succession during the second week in October. A nursemaid and laundress employed by the family both gave notice. Tess McCarthy was released from the hospital on Oct. 22, returning home to pack for the cross-country move and tend her children — conditions that surely belied a restful recuperative period.

The McCarthys died at the home of Roy McCarthy's parents, 2214 Blaisdell Avenue in Minneapolis. Notations in Roy McCarthy's calendar made by his mother Elizabeth McCarthy and quoted in Mary Mc-Carthy: A Life indicate that Roy succumbed first, at 2:30 p.m. on Nov. 6, and Tess at 11 pm on Nov. 7. A funeral mass was held Nov. 11, 1918, at St. Stephen's Church, but the caskets were stored in a vault until the spring of 1919 when the ground had thawed enough for them to be buried at Saint Mary's Cemmade the wearing of six-ply etery in Minneapolis (p. 19).

A Happy Family

Tess McCarthy was the daughter of prominent Seattle attorney Harold Preston (1858-1938) and Augusta Morgenstern Preston (1865-1954). Roy McCarthy's parents were Minneapolis grain merchant James Henry McCarthy and Elizabeth Sheridan McCarthy. Roy held a law degree from the University of Washington. Tess graduated from the University of Washington in 1911 with a liberal arts degree.

The McCarthys were married in 1911. Tess Preston, whose mother was Jewish and father Protestant, converted to Catholicism at the time of her marriage. According to Mary McCarthy, both sets of parents opposed the match. Roy Mc-Carthy entered the University of Washington School of Law shortly after Mary's birth. Despite continual money troubles, Roy's ill health, and the strain of Tess's almost continuous pregnancies, the young family's home life seems to have been warm and happy.

Why Travel Then?

Mary McCarthy later posed the question, Why travel then? In addition to the children's recent chicken pox, her father, Roy, had a bad heart and was perpetually sick in bed, dosing himself with digitalis. "The whole idea of traveling with a sick man and four small children at the height of an epidemic seems madness, but I can see why the risk was taken from an old Seattle newspaper clipping, preserved by my great-grandfather Preston: 'The party left for the east at this particular time in order to see another brother, Lewis McCarthy [Louis], who is in the aviation service and had a furlough home.' This was the last, no doubt, of my father's headstrong whims" (Memories..., p. 16). It also seems likely that Roy McCarthy's parents, on whose financial support Roy and Tess depended, had summoned them.

Mary McCarthy and her younger brothers were apparently not formally told that their parents had died, but rather led to believe that they were in a hospital. The siblings were left in the care of a great-aunt and her husband under what Mary McCarthy describes as exceedingly brutal conditions.

In 1923 Mary's maternal grandparents moved her back to Seattle. Mary McCarthy's home during her teenage years was the Prestons' large house at 712 35th Avenue in the Madrona neighborhood.

Amy Adams as Dr. Louise Banks in a scene from the movie "Arrival" directed by Denis Villeneuve.

Movies To See Before Oscars Night

By Glenn Whipp

Los Angeles Times

All those great movies you've been hearing about since the fall film festivals? They're finally arriving. Here's a list of films you'll need to need to see if you want to be up on the Oscars this year.

"Arrival" Denis Villeneuve's spooky scifi spectacle already has its share of fans in the academy, as Paramount has been busy courting their favor at private screenings. Oscar voters have been more open to genre films of late and this one stars five-time nominee Amy Adams. (Friday)

"Billy Lynn's Long Halftime Walk" Double-Oscar-winner Ang Lee's adaptation of this story of an Iraq war hero reconciling the hoopla of his homecoming with the trauma he suffered overseas entered the New York Film Festival as one of the season's most anticipated films. It left as one of the year's most debated, with many complaining that the technology Lee used to shoot the film made it look artificial. (Friday)

"Manchester by the Sea" Casey Affleck became the early front-runner for the lead Oscar actor when this movie screened at Sundance, and little has changed since then. Affleck's portrayal of a working-class man barely living with unspeakable grief will break your heart. And Michelle Williams makes the most of a brief supporting role. (Nov. 18)

"Lion" Harvey Weinstein's strongest shot at a best picture nomination lies with this moving story of an Indian man (Dev Patel) trying to find the family he lost as a boy. The film left many in tears when the movie premiered at the Toronto Film Festival. (Nov.

"Jackie" Natalie Portman's turn as Jackie Kennedy in the days immediately after her husband's assassination floored critics at Venice and Toronto. And the movie, directed by Pablo Larrain, is mesmerizing too, a fascinating portrait of grief and imagemaking. (Dec. 2)

"La La Land" Damien Chazelle's irresistible musical follows the romance between a struggling actress and a jazz purist. Emma Stone and Ryan Gosling make an appealing pair, and Chazelle has peppered the movie with nods to vintage Hollywood and Jacques Demy musicals. A delight for anyone who believes in the magic of movies. (Dec. 9)

"Silence" For the past 25 years, Martin Scorsese has been nurturing this movie about two Portuguese Jesuits on a mission to spread Christianity in Japan. That's a serious build of anticipation. Five of Scorsese's last six films have been nominated.

ADVICE: Dear Abby

Man's New Job With an Old Flame Gives His Wife a Chill

DEAR ABBY: My husband was recently offered a new job that carries with it a significant increase salary as well upward mobility. He was offered the job by a woman he used to work with years ago. She will be his new boss.

It was recently brought to my attention that not only were they co-workers, they also used to sleep together. He tells me there's absolutely nothing there, and that I don't need to be worried. However, I can't help but wonder why they have maintained contact for all these years, and why she sought him out to work for her.

She is also married, and I wonder if her husband knows their history, and if he would be OK with his wife's request to work with a former lover.

Am I overreacting? Or should people cut off contact with their exes once they are married? Should I be worried about a physical or emotional affair? I just don't have a good feeling about this. Thank you for your help. — NEEDS AN OBJECTIVE OPINION

NEEDS: DEAR In situation like this, much depends upon the individuals involved and the circumstances of the breakup. Not all romances end acrimoniously. Sometimes they gradually diminish and the people involved move on.

It would be interesting to know who told you your husband and this woman were once lovers. If it was your husband, I think you have less to be concerned about than if it was someone "trying to be helpful." It is possible that the woman contacted your husband because she is familiar with his work ethic and his abilities and thinks he would be the best person for the job.

That said, however, there are four people involved in this situation. And your question about whether her husband is aware of their history is a good one, because he should be.

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion for your readers prescription who take medication. When they are finished with it, they should peel the label off the bottle, stick it to a piece of paper and send it through a shredder.

These labels contain a lot of personal information. If they fall into the wrong hands, they could become shopping lists for drug addicts and our landfills could become their next source. Better to be safe than sorry, if for no other reason than privacy. — CHET IN KENTUCKY

DEAR CHET: I agree!
