For the first time since March, Midway Cinema in Chehalis is open and showing movies — only it's not all new releases like normally, but older classics.

The cinema, part of Coming Attractions' 16-theater circuit on the west coast, is the only show in the area — literally. Regal Cinemas and AMC Theaters, neither of which have locations in Lewis County, aren't reopening until the end of the July. So even if a Lewis County resident wanted to watch a movie in Olympia or Longview, they would have to wait until then. Regal isn't opening its U.S. theaters until July 31 and AMC is slated for a July 30 reopening.

That leaves Midway Cinema as the only option for locals. The theater closed March 15 due to the COVID-19 pandemic that shut down all non-essential businesses in the state. It briefly reopened in June to do curbside concession sales but not movie showings. Only a handful of people showed up each day and it wasn't financially feasible, so the idea was scrapped.

Then Lewis County moved into phase three of the state's four phase 'Safe Start' plan and the cinema officially reopened over Fourth of July Weekend, starting on July 3.

It wasn't a firework explosion of customers. Seventy-seven people showed up to watch 20 showings that first day. The numbers dropped the following day on the Fourth of July, as expected with a national holiday, Midway Cinema general manager Eric Bengstom said.

"I think the weather was really good and we had a lot of people who decided to do family and outdoor stuff," Bengston said.

It had 50 more customers on July 5, bringing the total number of customers that weekend to what Bengston called a slow Friday night during typical times.

"Business isn't fantastic," said Bengston, who has been the general manager for nearly three years.

It's a downturn not entirely due to people not attending movies due to safety concerns from COV-ID-19, Bengston said, a lot of it has to do with the current showings. Movies already shown include:

- "Back to the Future"
- "World War Z"
- "Arrival"

- "Star Trek"
- "Star Trek 2: The Wrath of Khan"
 - "Jurassic Park"
 - "The Outpost"
 - · "Trolls: World Tour"

The only new release out of those is "The Outpost," with the other being former summer blockbusters that were popular viewings at the respective times of their releases. Midway Cinema is having to show those old movies because of the lack of new releases scheduled for this time, due to COVID-19 delays. New, upcoming movies have pushed back their release dates in hopes that more states and counties will soon open up their theaters for customers.

"That will change near the end of the month," Bengston said.

"We're going to start to see some new releases, but until then we're going to run these older classics."

The classics do have a nostalgia factor to them. Some customers are coming back to see older movies that they watched in the theater as children, while other cinephiles are getting the opportunity to experience the big-screen appeal of classics they missed out on because they were too young.

"They've never seen "Jurassic Park" on the big screen, so they're coming in for that," Bengston said. "It's one of those things where a lot of people are taking advantage of that."

One local film aficionado who does movie reviews on YouTube spent the past couple weekends watching two movies a day because he had never seen a lot of these films on the big screen, Bengston said.

The cinema is currently operating on weekends only: Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. It is planning to move to seven-day-aweek showings on July 31, which coincides with a few newer releases slated to drop. That includes

"Unhinged" with Russell Crowe. Two weeks later Christopher Nolan's highly-anticipated film "Tenant" releases after being delayed three weeks. After that, there is about one big summer movie a week scheduled until September.

Safety-wise at Midway, the guidelines for theaters in Washington state are kind of a gray area, Bengston said. Currently it is limited to 50 percent capacity, but there is no requirement to cordon off seats and force spacing of customers. It hasn't been a big problem, so far, Bengston said, as a 300-seat auditorium is not even coming close to reaching 150 people as of now.

Masks are required in the building, per Gov. Jay Inslee's statewide mandate. But, just like a restaurant, many patrons are coming in and buying food and drinks. So the cinema is requiring masks in the lobby, hallways and restrooms, but not once the person reaches their seat.

"If you get to the auditorium and you've got your popcorn and drink, you can take off your mask and enjoy your movie," Bengston

The cinema is voluntarily taking contact information from its movie-goers in the event someone who contracted COVID-19 had watched a movie there.

Midway is also ramping up its cleaning efforts compared to its normal cleaning regimen, such as wiping down the counters and every touched surface more often. Also, the current eight movie showings is down from a regular schedule, a decision made to allow custodians more time to clean each theater between showing and spray it down with disinfectant for 10 minutes.

"That's where we've gone and I think that's where most of the industry has gone," Bengston said. "It's going to be kind of a wait-and-see situation; if people are comfortable enough to come back in when we start to have the bigger, newer movies."

Midway is also running a guest appreciation ticket price. Normal ticket prices are in the $8-9 range, but the cinema is currently showing all movies at $5 a ticket, flat rate. Not only can locals see classic movies, but they can see them at a classic ticket price. It's normally a deal reserved for $5 Tuesdays. Normal ticket pricing will likely resume after July 31 once the summer blockbusters arrive.

DearAbby

DEAR ABBY: My oldest brother is running for a state office. Unlike me, he does not like animals. He has "hauled" litters of puppies off and shot at cats. In addition, he refuses to help our elderly parents. Family or not, I don't want someone to be a leader in our state capital who exhibits such poor moral and unethical behavior.

He has been married several times, and I know for a fact he cheated on one of his wives. I avoid attending his fundraisers and asking for votes, but other family members keep telling me that "blood is thicker than water," and that I "must" vote for him regardless of his behavior. Of course, behind the curtain I can vote for whoever I want, but should I cave to the pressure to show up in support of him at public events? Even my husband said I should donate money to his campaign because he is family. What is your opinion? — NON-SUPPORTER IN THE SOUTH

DEAR NON-SUPPORTER: If

you do not support a candidate, keep your checkbook closed. And as to showing up to endorse your brother's run for office, continue to refrain and cross your fingers that your absence won't be noticed amidst all the excitement. If your husband wants to donate to your morally degenerate brother's campaign, it is his choice, and he has a right to it just as you have a right to yours.

P.S. Anyone who would shoot at a defenseless animal and neglect his aged parents ("Honor thy father and thy mother") really doesn't belong in ANY office.

DEAR ABBY: My wife of 39 years decided two weeks ago to cease all communication with me. We had a sometimes-rocky marriage, but since becoming empty-nesters six months ago, we have enjoyed a rebirth of our relationship — long walks, games, fun meals, concerts, etc.

Two weeks ago, we had what I thought was a minor disagreement about the use of a credit card. Since then she has treated me like I don't exist. She answers my questions with one word only or no response.

I have begged

By Abigail Van Buren

I have begged her to talk to me about what's wrong; she just turns away. She has altered her daily schedule to avoid having contact with me. I am shattered. What can I do? — CLUELESS IN TENNESSEE

DEAR CLUELESS: It's time to review why your marriage to this woman was "rocky." Stop begging, step back and count yourself fortunate that you have had this reminder. Counseling might help you and your wife to communicate in a healthier way if she is willing to try. However, if she isn't, you will have to decide how much more "punishment" you are willing to tolerate when you disagree, and what is realistic to do about it if you aren't.

DEAR ABBY: We have a neighbor whose adult son has gotten into trouble with the law. His mom and dad are devastated and have withdrawn from all of us. How do we handle it when we see them around the neighborhood? Do we ignore "the elephant" and just say hi? Do we ask them how their son is doing? It's so sad to see them suffer, and we don't know what to do. — WHAT TO DO IN THE EAST

DEAR WHAT TO DO: When you see your neighbors, be cordial. Make polite conversation, and if they mention their son, listen to what they have to say and be supportive, but not judgmental.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I married two years ago. A year later we welcomed our first child. I never imagined I would ever want a divorce. Well, I found out early this year that my husband has a fetish/fantasy about bigger women. (He actually said it.) He is a "feeder." He has purchased books related to these things and watches videos and reads stories about it while sitting next to me on the couch! It turns him on. He has asked me to consider gaining weight. I told him he needs help.

I made an appointment for him to see a therapist, and am forcing him to go. I feel cheated on and disrespected. I don't know how to handle this bomb he dropped on me. I don't know how to be with someone who has such a strong impulse. I hate to feel at fault for walking away and breaking up our family, but I can't go along with this and risk my health. I also don't know how to live apart from him. Any help is appreciated. — WIFE OF A FEEDER

DEAR WIFE: Your husband should have discussed this with you before you married. Gaining weight to feed your husband's fetish would not be healthy for you physically or — feeling as you do — emotionally.

Because you already have a licensed mental health professional in your database, schedule an appointment for yourself to help you rationally decide what you need to do. (Can your husband be content to have his fantasy but not involve you?) You may not want to "feel at fault" for walking away, but you aren't going to change him, and your first responsibility must be to maintain your health so you can parent your child to adulthood.

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible to be in love with someone who is incarcerated? — ROMANTIC IN TEXAS

PEAR ROMANTIC: Yes. However, it depends upon the length of the relationship and whether you met the person before he or she was incarcerated. If you knew the person before, it is possible. However, if your relationship began while he or she was serving time, it is extremely important that you verify ANYthing you are being told and refrain from sending the person money.

DEAR ABBY: I am 19 and have been kicked out of my house. I'm grateful for everything my parents have done for me. My dad continues to compare me to my older siblings, although I'm the exact opposite of them. They are not going to college, they barely graduated from high school and continue to abuse alcohol and drugs.

I'm in college earning almost all A's. I graduated from high school with flying colors and have a steady job. I provide for myself (food, gas, buying anything I need) and pay for car insurance. I have tried my hardest to be the best daughter and a good influence for my younger siblings.

I have asked my father multiple times during the last year to stop comparing me to my older siblings. He hasn't. Our last conversation was a few weeks ago, when he told me to pack my stuff and get out of the house because I was an "ungrateful daughter" and "hoeing around just like my older siblings."

I have been focusing on my education and can't understand how he came to that conclusion. Frankly, I was very hurt he thought that of me. I'm not my siblings; I am myself, and I'm doing the best I can to give myself a successful future. My father refuses to see that. What should I do? — BEWILDERED DAUGHTER IN TEXAS

DEAR DAUGHTER: I don't know what's wrong with your father, but something is. You appear to be mature and responsible and doing your best to lay the foundation for a successful future. I applaud you for it.

If it's possible for you to live elsewhere, perhaps with other relatives, and avoid your father's uncalled-for verbal abuse, it might be healthier for you. Do not expect him to be pleased about it, because no matter how hard you try, you may never be able to please him, so be prepared.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I have been dating for three years. The one issue we argue about is religion. I am a Catholic and he's from another Christian denomination. I respect all religions and am open-minded.

However, after going to his church three times, I didn't like it at all. They have many strict rules which, if not obeyed, will result in a person being shunned. What kind of church does that? They compare Catholics to themselves and say everything Catholics do is wrong according to the Bible. I have never felt so unwelcome in my life.

My boyfriend's parents want me to convert, but I don't want to. Because of this, his relationship with his parents is being affected. He plans to quit his church and become an atheist. I don't know how to feel about this. It would be hard to convince him to join my church. We have had many fights over this, and I wonder if we should just break up. That way we wouldn't have to discuss who is converting or where we are going to marry. Please give me some advice. — STRESSED IN THE ISLANDS

DEAR STRESSED: Considering the stance your boyfriend's family's religion has on marrying out of the faith, I'm surprised your relationship has made it this far. Fighting benefits neither of you. Talking about this calmly and rationally might bring you closer.

If he quits his church, his family and friends will make every effort to isolate and punish him. He may have to completely rebuild his social relationships. If he has any sort of religious inclination, rather than him overreacting by "becoming an (instant) atheist," the two of you might like to explore finding a denomination together that fills your needs. But be prepared for pushback because his parents (and possibly yours) are not going to like it.

Laugh out loud Fox's animated comedies renewed for future seasons

By Sarah Passingham TV Media

ox heard that everyone is looking for a laugh these days, so it has renewed its "Animation Domination" block of shows for a new sea-

The network was uniquely primed to handle the hurdles of the COVID-19 pandemic's production shutdowns with already-completed reality and drama series on the slate for its upcoming fall 2020 schedule, and comedy fans can look forward to new episodes of "Bob's Burgers," "The Simpsons,"
"Bless the Harts" and "Family Guy" in the near-ish future as well they've all been renewed for the 2020-21 season.

Animation is a labor-intensive. remote process with long production periods, so the good news is that Fox's "Animation Domination" shows were well on their way to completion before the pandemic shut down anything.

Those four shows make up the network's Sunday night block, but a newcomer to Fox's animated comedy lineup was also renewed, this one for a second season: "Duncanville" tells the story of Duncan Harris, an average teenage boy who lives an elaborate imaginary life where he ascends beyond his awkward, embarrassing 15-year-old existence to a place where he lives out his idealized adulthood. Amy Poehler ("Parks and Recreation") voices Duncan and his mother, Annie, and executive produces the series.

"Bob's Burgers" might be the veteran series among the bunch, but it also has the most on its horizon. Not only was it renewed for its 11th season in May of this year, but a feature-length film is expected to be ready for release in April of next year. Disney, Fox's parent company, announced in April which of its theatrical release dates were being shuffled, and the "Bob's Burgers" movie was on the list, so fans of the show can look forward to what may very well be their first in-theatre experience of the year watching Bob, Linda, Tina, Gene and Louise Belcher get into some trouble in the family restaurant.

Speaking of Fox animation veterans, the network naturally renewed the longest-running American sitcom ever, "The Simpsons," through its 32nd season back in 2019. This upcoming season will include the comedy's 700th episode, an incredible milestone that's like the cherry on top of yet another record that the series broke in Season 31. "The Simpsons" tops the list of American scripted prime-time series with the most episodes, having surpassed the former title-holder, "Gunsmoke," at 636 episodes. "The Simpsons" has been a major influence on popular culture since the first episode aired in 1989, but that doesn't mean that there's no room to grow in 2020.

The animation itself improves with time (I remember being a bit shocked when I saw the animation of the first iteration of "The Simpsons" as a short that my parents had recorded from TV on a VHS tape), and so do the characterizations of Springfield's citizens. Apu Nahasapeemapetilon has been voiced by Hank Azaria ("Brockmire") - a white, American man - since the inception of the char-

Apu has received criticism, though, as he is portrayed as a stereotype of a South Asian man, and the topic was even the subject explored in the 2017 feature documentary, "The Problem With Apu." While Azaria announced in a statement this year that he will no longer voice the character, with Matt Groening, creator of "The Simpsons," announcing shortly after that Apu will remain on the show, more needs to be done to rebuild Apu than casting a South Asian voice actor to speak for him. The news of an imminent recasting is hopeful, though, and the likelihood of seasons upon seasons of "The Simpsons" in the future means that there could be a lot more to look forward to for Apu.

When "The Simpsons" was renewed back in 2019, "Family Guy" was also promised a spot on Fox's Sunday night lineup through its 19th season. The renewal isn't that much of a surprise since not only has "Family Guy" been on the air for more than two decades, its creator, Seth MacFarlane ("The Orville"), is more powerful than ever, having signed a $200-million deal with NBC Universal this year. MacFarlane may be busy, but that won't stop him from reprising his voice acting duties as Peter Griffin, the bumbling New England husband and father who constantly makes embarrassing situations even worse.

Fox has shown that the network has hope for its fledgling shows, too, renewing "Duncanville" and fellow animated comedy "Bless the Harts" for a second season. The latter really scratches an itch for those missing "King of the Hill." "Bless the Harts" creator Emily

Spivey was a story editor on "King of the Hill" and said in an interview with Decider that she had "always loved the sort of gentle, humane humor of the show and how authentic it was to Austin, to Arlen, to Texas," and that she "wanted to do the same thing with North Carolina" in "Bless the Harts."

The series boasts some serious star power in its voice actor cast, despite how down-to-earth its characters are. Kristen Wiig ("Saturday Night Live") voices Jenny Hart, a single mom whose mother, Betty (Maya Rudolph, "Big Mouth"), lives with her and her daughter, Violet (Jillian Bell, "Workaholics"), an artistic, sarcastic teenager.

Fox has given its audiences a lot to look forward to laughing at, so keep an eye out for the return of animated comedies "Bob's Burgers," "The Simpsons," "Bless the Harts" and "Family Guy" this fall and the Season 2 premiere of "Duncanville" sometime in 2021.

Julia Garner stars in "The Assistant"

By Jessica Gosse

TV Media

"The Assistant" (2019)

Following in the footsteps of the #MeToo movement and 2019's "Bombshell," this dramatic film that joins the Hulu lineup on Sunday, July 20, looks at the abusive and high-stress nature of female jobs in the entertainment industry. The film follows the life of an aspiring film producer named Jane (Julia Garner, "Ozark"), who, upon graduating from college, is thrilled to get a job working as a junior assistant to a major entertainment executive. Like most assistant jobs, Jane's daily workload is filled with many thankless tasks, from ordering lunch and making photocopies to fielding a relentless barrage of phone calls. At first, everything seems fine, but as she continues each day, she becomes more aware of the frequent mistreatment of women in the office. When it becomes clear to her that her boss is using his position of power to get women to sleep with him, Jane's eyes are opened to the serious level of sexual harassment that she is enabling, and she begins to wonder if and how she can change this dynamic.

"The Last Full Measure" (2019)

Based on the true story of William H. Pitsenbarger, don't miss this amazing war film when it comes to Hulu on Tuesday, July 21. During the Vietnam War, Pitsenbarger (Jeremy Irvine, "Treadstone") served as a U.S. Air Force pararescueman, saving more than 60 men during his tour of duty. On his last mission, he died in the field after choosing to stay behind and help his fellow soldiers rather than being taken to safety. Now, more than 30 years later, Pitsenbarger's best friend and partner on his final mission, Tom Tulley (William Hurt, "Goliath"), is requesting that Pitsenbarger be awarded a Congressional Medal of Honor. However, despite his heroic actions, the request can't go through without the circumstances being investigated, and up-and-coming Pentagon staffer Scott Huffman (Sebastian Stan, "Avengers: Endgame," 2019) is assigned to the case. With help from Tulley, Huffman manages to track down three Army veterans who witnessed Pitsenbarger's heroism – Billy Takoda (Samuel L. Jackson, "Glass," 2019), Ray Mott (Ed Harris, "Westworld") and Jimmy Burr (the late Peter Fonda, "Ghost Rider," 2007). The more Huffman learns about Pitsenbarger, the more he begins to question why he was never awarded the medal in the first place. He soon uncovers a highlevel conspiracy, but is torn about coming forward with the truth when he realizes his own career is on the line.

"Bolt" (2008)

On Wednesday, July 22, go on a funfilled adventure as this animated comedy joins the Hulu lineup. Bolt (voiced by John Travolta, "Grease," 1978), an American white shepherd, lives an action-packed life in Hollywood using superpowers to save his owner,

Sebastian Stan and William Hurt in "The Last Full Measure"

Penny (voiced by Miley Cyrus, "The Last Song," 2010), from the evil Dr. Calico (voiced by Malcolm McDowell, "Mozart in the Jungle"). Unfortunately, what Bolt doesn't realize is that none of it is real – he doesn't have superpowers and doesn't fight evil, it's only a TV show, and the producers have organized everything to make him believe that this is his real life. When the latest episode features a plotline in which Penny gets kidnapped, Bolt believes she has really been taken, and breaks out of his trailer to save her.

In the process of breaking out, though, he is knocked unconscious and into a box that gets sent to New York. In the real world for the first time, Bolt struggles to come to grips with reality as he teams up with a cat named Mittens (Susie Essman, "Curb Your Enthusiasm") and a hamster named Rhino (Mark Walton, "Chicken Little," 2005), who tell him his life is fake and he doesn't really have powers. Together, they face the dangers of the real world as they try and get Bolt back home to Hollywood.

Canadian singer-songwriter Leonard Cohen

By Jessica Gosse TV Media

"Marianne & Leonard: Words of Love" (2019)

Muses aren't just mythical beings that spur creativity and inspiration, sometimes they're real people – John Lennon had Yoko Ono, Paul McCartney had Linda Eastman, Kurt Cobain had Courtney Love, I could go on and on. But the relationship between artist and muse can be quite tumultuous. The delicate nature of these relationships is explored when this documentary joins the Prime lineup on Sunday, July 19. "Words of Love" looks specifically at the relationship between legendary Canadian singersongwriter Leonard Cohen and his muse, Marianne Ilhen. The pair met in the early 1960s when Cohen was a poet who went to live on the Greek island Hydra, which was known for being filled with artists. With footage from old home movies and interviews, the film shows how their relationship changed from being a carefree island romance to a more trying one as Cohen discovered himself as a singer. Ilhen was the inspiration behind many of Cohen's poems and songs, though the most notable is, of course, the 1967 hit "So Long, Marianne." Though the pair was only together for 10 years (which seems like a blip in Cohen's illustrious career), the documentary shows how their love lasted long after their split, right up until Ilhen's death from leukemia in 2016 and Cohen's own death three months later.

"Jim Gaffigan: The Pale Tourist"

Funnyman Jim Gaffigan ("Troop Zero," 2019) returns to Prime on Friday, July 24, in the premiere of his second stand-up comedy special for the streamer. Filmed in Barcelona, Spain, and Ontario, Canada, "The Pale Tourist" shows the Grammy-nominated his cultural surroundings to fuel his act. The title itself is quite apt as Gaffigan discusses the hilarity and chaos of a family vacation, the nature of tourism and his incredibly pale appearance, going so far as to describe himself as looking "like an enormous recessive gene." This latest stand-up special from Gaffigan is sure to hit home for anyone who has ever dealt with a family vacation or even just felt like they stand out as a blatant tourist in a different country.

Rosamund Pike in "Radioactive"

"Radioactive" (2019)

Rosamund Pike ("Gone Girl," 2014) stars as Marie Curie, one of the most celebrated and inspirational women in science, in this biopic coming to Prime on Friday, July 24. The film begins in 1895, when Marie was still known as Maria Salomea Sklodowska and was living in Paris as a Polish immigrant. She was already working as a scientist and was closing in on a breakthrough when she met fellow scientist Pierre Curie (Sam Riley, "Pride and Prejudice and Zombies," 2016) and fell in love. Despite being a wife, and later a mother to her two daughters, Irene (Anya Taylor-Joy, "Glass," 2019) and Eve (Cara Bossom,"Deep State"), Marie was still dedicated to her work, and became the first woman to win a Nobel Prize. "Radioactive" follows Marie and Pierre into the 20th century as they pioneer research in radiation, leading to the dangerous creation of a substance that could both cure and cause cancer. Their lives are brilliantly depicted by director Marjan Satrapi ("The Voices," 2014), who shows not only the struggles the couple faced due to the repercussions of their work, but the struggles that Marie faced as a woman in science pitching radical ideas to men who still believed the Earth was flat.

"The Kissing Booth 2" (2020)

One of Netflix's most popular teen romances gets a sequel when this comedy premieres Friday, July 24, on the streamer. Joey King ("Slender Man," 2018) reprises her role as high school senior Elle Evans, whose life drastically changed after her summer romance with bad-boy Noah Flynn (Jacob Eldori, "Euphoria"). However, Noah is now away at Harvard while Elle still has her senior year of high school ahead of her. The two struggle to maintain a long-distance relationship, especially when Noah becomes close with a college girl (Maisie Richardson-Sellers, "DC's Legends of Tomorrow") and Elle befriends a handsome new classmate (Taylor Zakhar Perez, "Embeds"), and they begin to question how much they really trust each other. All the while, Elle faces what is likely the most common senior student problem: getting into her dream college. Luckily, she still has her best friend, Lee (Joel Courtney, "The Messengers"), his girlfriend, Rachel (Meganne Young, "Black Sails"), and Mrs. Flynn (Molly Ringwald, "Riverdale"), her pseudo-mom, to turn to for support.

"How to Sell Drugs Online (Fast)" Season 2

On Tuesday, July 21, Maximilian Mundt ("Radio Heimat," 2016) returns to Netflix as high school student Moritz Zimmerman in the Season 2 premiere of this German coming-of-age series based on a real case. Season 1 saw Moritz get his heart broken by his girlfriend, Lisa (Anna Lena Klenke, "The Silent Revolution," 2018), and, in an effort to win her back, begin selling ecstasy online. With help from his best friend, Lenny (Danilo Kamperidis, "The Peppercorns"), the small-business venture quickly spiraled out of control and thrust them into the world of major drug trafficking. Now, Moritz and his friends begin to expand their business, but the more successful they become, the more dangers they face, whether it be rival dealers or the police.

"Norsemen" Season 3

Head back to the year 790 as this Norwegian comedy series returns for a third season on Wednesday, July 22. While Viking stories are usually best suited for dramas, this series manages to balance the typical bloody and serious storylines with witty and well-timed humor. The first two seasons follow the life of Chieftain Olav (Henrik Mestad, "Okkupert") and his wife, Hildur (Marianne Saastad Ottesen, "Lilyhammer"), as they handle day-to-day life in their village of Norheim. Together they deal with a rival tribe led by Jarl Varg (Jon Oilgarden, "Helt Perfekt"), conflicts with neighboring villages, and a Roman slave (Trond Fausa, "Neste Sommer"), who constantly tries to modernize their way of living, but only causes chaos. Despite entering its third season, the series is actually set to take viewers back to a time before the first two installments in a prequel season that has been deemed "Season 0."

"Animal Crackers" (2020)

Come one, come all to the premiere of this animated family film on Friday, July 24. John Krasinski ("The Office") lends his voice to Owen Huntington, a man leading a boring life with a job at a dog biscuit company that keeps him so busy he barely sees his wife, Zoe

Maximilian Mundt stars in "How to Sell Drugs Online (Fast)"

(voiced by Emily Blunt, "A Quiet Place," 2018), or his daughter. Life looks bleak for Owen until he finds out that his mysterious uncle has left him ownership of a circus. Owen finally gets excited, having loved the circus when he was a boy, but his joy quickly fades when his other uncle, Horatio (voiced by lan McKellen, "Mr. Holmes," 2015), shows up furious that he wasn't given the circus and announces that he intends to take over. Despite this, Owen and Zoe reopen the circus, but with aging performers and no animals things don't go well – that is, until a clown named Chesterfield (voiced by Danny DeVito, "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia") lets Owen in on his uncle's secret: a box of magic animal crackers. The crackers turn whoever eats them into that animal and replaces the animal cracker with a human cracker they must eat to become human again. Owen begins to use the crackers, performing in the circus as various animals each night. But when Horatio has someone steal the box of crackers, Owen is stuck as an animal. Now, Owen, his family and the circus performers must work together to stop Horatio and make Owen human again.

hollywood O&A

By Adam Thomlison

TV Media

Q: Why did they change Perry Mason so much for the new HBO show? Why does everything always have to be so dark?

A: Fans of the original '50s/'60s show, and the later series of telefilms, were understandably jarred by HBO's new take on "Perry Ma-

The eight-episode miniseries (though we all know that these things have a way of being extended if they're successful) stars Matthew Rhys ("Brothers & Sisters") as a grittier, meaner version of the title character, made famous by Raymond Burr.

Śhortly after the show's debut, the news media was desperate to get Rhys' take on why the show went that way with such a beloved character. Rhys had a few different answers, but his main point was that the goal wasn't so much to make Mason less good, but to make him more human.

'We're going to load his bases. You're going to see the weight of the world on his shoulders," Rhys told People magazine ahead of the show's premiere in June. "And there's a number of things he doesn't do right. But ultimately, his heart's in the right place."

That speaks to the other thing the show is trying to do, story-wise: It's a prequel, trying to show us Perry Mason's journey towards becoming a brilliant, compassionate, flawless defender of the weak.

From a more practical point of view, they also wanted to change the character enough to justify a remake - to give viewers something they can't get from the 300-plus hours of original "Perry Mason" already available.

Q: I'm stumped. I remember seeing a British spy show featuring an agent named Sam McCready, but I don't remember much else about it. Can you find out what it was called?

A: Much like a good secret agent, this show went by many names, and you're never quite sure whose side it's on.

Was Sam McCready (played by British stage actor Alan Howard, "Strapless," 1989) a supporting character in a series of six spy movies? The star of one six-episode TV show called "Frederick Forsyth Presents"? Or the main character in a novel that was workshopped on TV before taking its final form?

Solution on page 12

It's easier to talk about it as a show. "Frederick Forsyth Presents" originally aired on ITV in Britain from 1989 to 1990. It consisted of six long episodes that functioned more like movies – their plots were mostly unrelated, except for the presence of aging intelligence agent McCready (and a couple of appearances by real-life assassin Carlos the Jackal).

The show was co-written by the great thriller novelist Frederick Forsyth and screenwriter Murray Smith. Forsyth later came up with an overarching storyline (about McCready) to knit the individual stories into a single novel, which he called "The Deceiver."
