Newly-Opened Shona's Food Company Offers Comfort Fare With a British Flair

FIERY: Owner Shona Smith Brings Chef Experience and Irish Background to Lewis County

By Eric Trent etrent@chronline.com

Editor's Note: The Chronicle is working to assist local businesses suffering from the effects of the COVID-19 virus spread and associated government orders to close or limit commerce. There will be a feature on a local business in each edition of The Chronicle and at chronline.com moving forward. To be considered, email reporter Eric Trent at etrent@ chronline.com. Additionally, The Chronicle will continue to offer its coverage of the coronavirus and its effects across the community, state and nation free outside of our paywall at chronline.com.

While other restaurants around the nation were shuttering, either temporarily or permanently, one local chef was just getting started on her newest creation: Shona's Food Company, which opened in late July.

Located at 570 N. Market Blvd., in Chehalis, Smith took the opportunity when her friend, the owner of Breakwall Cafe, which was previously located here, moved their business to another location.

"She asked if I would be interested," Smith said. "She knew I had been laid off and I really loved this space and the idea of being able to do something for myself. And here I am."

Though this is Smith's first time owning a cafe, she is no stranger to the food industry. Smith has worked as the head chef at Jeremy's Farm to Table, Joy's Once Upon a Thyme and was an executive chef at a golf course.

Her love of food and cooking came after she moved with her mom, who was also a chef, and little brother from the mountains of Oregon to Belfast, Ireland. There, her mother opened up a Mexican restaurant in the city of 300,000 that is known as the birthplace and construction of the Titanic. Smith could see the shipyard cranes that built the Titanic from her bedroom skylight.

At the restaurant, Smith was a waitress and prep cook, her little brother washed dishes More Information on Shona's Food Company and her mother was the chef. They would visit the beaches of northern Ireland and harvest cockles to eat.

"Food has just been the center of my life since I could remember," Smith said.

It was also during a time period known as The Troubles, a three-decade-long violent conflict between nationalists and unionists in northern Ireland.

"You had soldiers patrolling with machine guns in hand and we were like, 'What is going on?" Smith said. "A lot of chaos and turmoil. You'd be shopping in the city and you'd be rushed away and then there would be car bombs detonating. It was absolutely crazy."

The family spent nearly six years there, while Smith was between the ages of 9 and 15 years old, before moving back to the states. They eventually landed in Chehalis and Smith graduated from W.F. West.

Smith still goes back to Ireland to visit her grandparents, who were the inspiration for her meat pies, which are the specialty at her new cafe. They come in four varieties: traditional Scottish lamb with mint sauce; pork sausage; potato, cabbage, chive and sheep cheese; and cheese and onion.

"I really wanted to do something I was very connected to and I could have fun with,"

Smith said. "I thought, 'Oh, grab-and-go, I'm going to do some meat pies and pastries and put all those passions into something I'm connected to."

Smith also offers baked goods, including her aunt Sharon's Scottish shortbread. To bring it back to the American side, Smith offers an Oakie buttermilk banana cake, which was inspired from her other grandmother who taught her to bake, along with a dark chocolate Texas cake.

"Just kind of a culmination of both sides of my ancestry to bring it back to real good comfort food that makes me s happy, and playing around with everything in between," Smith said. "I love getting to the root of food and doing research."

One customer came in and asked for a yooper pasty, a type of meat pie with potatoes, onions and spices that was brought to Michigan by immigrant miners from England. So Smith researched it and was able to recreate it for him.

Smith also incorporates the sheep cheese she uses at the cafe into as many recipes as possible. Her cheese cakes are made with fresh Black Sheep Creamery cheese, she makes her own ice cream with sheeps' milk for the affogato espresso and also in the cheese and onion pasty. All the produce and eggs are also sourced locally.

It's been rewarding not being stuck back in the kitchen all day and actually being able to reconnect and talk with people, Smith said, who does everything by herself. She's the cook, dishwasher, waitress and runs the cash register. Business has gone surprisingly well, too, she said. People have been coming in to eat often and there is outdoor seating available, as well.

"I finally get that addition back to my food to really talk about it and share my passion," Smith said. "It's been a dream come absolute true."

DearAbby

DEAR ABBY: My 50-year-old estranged daughter-in-law was abused by her brother growing up, and her father defends the abuser, which upsets her no end. I'm friendly with her father because he has been nice to me, and this revelation was news to me.

My daughter-in-law sent an email to me and others saying how hurt she is. I would like to respond, but since I'm friendly with her father, I'm not sure what to say. I want to tell her I am deeply sorry for her having been abused because it is extremely traumatic. Do you have any advice for me?

I love my son and his family, and I don't understand how things got this way between us. They no longer speak to me or let me (or my wife) have a relationship with my grandchildren, whom we love very much. — HURT FATHER-IN-LAW IN TEXAS

DEAR HURT: It is not surprising that your son and daughter-inlaw are now estranged from you and don't want you around their children. Things got this way because you placed as high a priority on your friendship with the father who defends her abuser as you did on your relationship with your daughter-in-law. While you understand that what happened to her was traumatic, you seem unable to grasp just how painful it has been for her. By siding with the wrong person because he was nice to you, you have intensified her trauma.

DEAR ABBY: I have a large extended family who all live a few states away. I didn't grow up with any of them, as I've never lived near them. I see or speak to them maybe once a decade. We don't exchange emails, and we aren't friends on Facebook. This isn't because I don't like them; they are pleasant strangers.

I get the impression that my limb of the family tree is perceived as the affluent one, and I sometimes receive life-event announcements from cousins and their children I haven't seen in years and don't know. In truth, I think I receive them only for the possibility of receiving something from me. Am I obligated to send a gift just because I received an invitation to events they know I will never attend — such as graduations, baby showers, etc.? — PURSUED RELATIVE

DEAR RELATIVE: You are not obligated to send a gift or money to people you have barely met. You are also not obligated to send gifts to people you haven't had contact with in a decade. The announcements should not, however, go unacknowledged. Send a nice card with a congratulatory note, and you may find yourself receiving fewer of these invitations as postage becomes increasingly expensive.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to address a problem I've never seen in your column. A lot of people have living wills but most don't remember what's in them.

My wife went to the hospital for a routine procedure that required anesthesia. After three hours of what was supposed to be a one-hour procedure, a nurse came out, said there was "a problem" and took me back to the recovery room. My wife was writhing on the bed and kept rasping, "I can't breathe!" Six nurses tried to put an oxygen mask over her face, but she kept fighting them, trying to rip it off. I was in total shock.

I didn't know how to help her, so I asked the anesthesiologist standing there to do something, and he said her living will was a DNR (do not resuscitate). She remained in cardiac and respiratory distress for eight hours before a pulmonologist was mercifully called and she was put on a ventilator.

I went home and pulled out our living wills. Hers stated, and I quote, "the individual so named must be terminally ill or permanently unconscious." I had no idea. She was neither of those things. If I'd had a copy of the living will WITH me, I'm sure she would have immediately been put on a ventilator. I lost her six months later, on Christmas morning.

I urge everyone who goes to the hospital for any procedure to make sure the person accompanying them has a copy of their advance directive. I still feel guilty. Her outcome could have been so much different, and she might have lived much longer. — GRIEV-ING HUSBAND

DEAR GRIEVING HUSBAND:

Please accept my deepest sympathy for the loss of your wife. Suffering as much pain as you are over her death, please don't torture yourself further over what you "would have, could have, should have" done. I appreciate your taking the time to share this important information with me and my readers. Your letter serves as a reminder that all end-of-life documents should be reviewed regularly to be sure they reflect current thinking. Thank you.

DEAR ABBY: I'm married to a great husband. We worked well together in our business. He's loyal, dependable, was a great stepfather when my son was young, etc.

When we were younger, we were always very busy working on the house, raising a family and starting a small business. My son is now grown and has moved away, the house needs little work, we no longer have the business and we both work part-time.

The problem is, we don't have the same interests. I do a lot alone or with friends, but many of them have moved or become very settled down. I rarely have anyone to do anything with unless it's something that interests my husband. It's hard to get him to do anything I want to do. He either complains or refuses.

Looking back, I think he was always like this, but we were too busy to notice. I feel very alone now. I feel like time is ticking by, and I'm wasting my life, my time, etc. Many days I think I should leave, but leaving would change our lifestyle dramatically. Sometimes I feel we only stay together for the lifestyle. I have tried to talk to him about this many times, but I get nowhere. Suggestions? — TIME TICKS BY IN NEW ENGLAND

DEAR TIME TICKS BY: You feel alone and adrift because you are. The glue that held your marriage together seems to have been your son, who is now grown and has moved away. It's time to ask yourself how important your "lifestyle" is.

It's possible that if you remain in this marriage, you can find what you are looking for by becoming more independent. Travel, join special interest clubs, cultivate new friends, take classes that interest you and live your life. You might also visit meetup.com to get involved in activities in your area with like-minded people.

There is no guarantee your husband will ever be the partner you fantasize he should be. Some sessions with a therapist might be useful to help you clarify your thinking, and that's what I'm suggesting.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-yearold who wants to be an individual. My 10-year-old brother constantly copies me and mocks me, yet he gets upset whenever I point it out. The last straw was when I went through his YouTube and found almost all of the same music I like.

My parents always say I should be flattered, or he's just looking up to me. I am tired of it! He copies the things I say (and the way I say them), the music I like and my hobbies. It's very, very annoying, and I guarantee that is why he continues to do it.

I've tried telling him to stop, but somehow, in any conversation relating to that, I end up being the bad guy. Should I just throw away my entire collection of interests, enjoyments and hobbies? — LOS-ING MY INDIVIDUALITY

DEAR LOSING: On the contrary. Accept that because you are older, you may always be the leader, and your younger brother will continue to follow you and mimic you. He may not do it to annoy you but because he lacks your imagination and interests of his own. Your mistake is letting what he does affect you. The sooner you overcome that impulse, the better off you will be. You may not be able to control your brother, but you can control the way you react to him, and that's a skill that will serve you well as you go through life.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby. com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Jude Law stars in HBO's eerie drama 'The Third Day'

By Rachel Jones TV Media

The disturbing and captivating new series "The Third Day" premieres Monday, Sept. 14, on HBO. The thriller was originally scheduled to premiere May 11 of this year, but the project was put on hold due to the coronavirus pandemic sweeping the globe, which made production almost impossible and delayed the show's release.

"The Third Day" follows Sam (Jude Law, "The Nest," 2020), a man who travels alone and ends up on a mystical island off the British coast in the dead of summer. In a separate but connected dimension, another outsider named Helen (Naomie Harris, "Black and Blue," 2019) also finds her way to the island.

The series features other stars, including Katherine Waterston ("Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them," 2016), Paddy Considine ("How to Build a Girl," 2020), Emily Watson ("Chernobyl"), John Dagleish ("The Gentlemen," 2019) and Freya Allan ("The Witcher").

The series is divided into three distinct yet interconnected plots. The first batch of episodes, entitled "Summer" and directed by Marc Munden ("Utopia," 2013), follows Sam as he explores the mysterious island. He's met there by locals who are keen on preserving their traditions, no matter the cost.

The second chapter, "Autumn," will be a live event broadcast from London, England. It's been described by producers as a "major immersive theater event." This live installment of the series, which features Law, Harris and the rest of the cast, can be viewed on a single take, and it's meant to let the audience step inside the story as it unfolds.

"Autumn" offers the audience a deeper experience of the mystical island, allowing them to view it in a real-time broadcast. This interactive segment runs in a single, uninterrupted, cinematic take that showcases the locals' rituals and traditions and how they blur the lines of reality.

The third batch of episodes, "Winter," was directed by Philippa Lowthorpe ("Three Girls"). It focuses on the strong-willed Helen, who arrives on the island in search of solutions. But when she inadvertently creates a bigger conflict, it eventually leads to a battle that will determine the future of the island and its inhabitants. The psychological thriller is nothing short of mesmerizing, as it lays out an enchanting yet twisted world where nothing is what it seems, and viewers are taken on a series of crazy twists and turns that ultimately lead to a shocking climax.

A new, more expansive trailer for the series (after the teaser that was released in April) has been unveiled by HBO. It features Sam driving into the island as locals talk about the place being something special. But the road to it suddenly ends as it sinks underwater, and it seems that Sam will be trapped in paradise for good.

The island's inhabitants are tight-lipped, and as the truth of local rituals and the island's secrets start to sweep over Sam, he attempts to resolve the trauma of his past as his present is flooded with his night-mares.

Some are already comparing the show to the now-classic ABC series "Lost" and the 1973 British horror flick "The Wicker Man," due mostly to the eeriness and mystery. According to critics, "The Third Day" has the potential to keep audiences on the edge of their seats. Meanwhile, fans who have been treated to an early viewing have compared it to the celebrated 2019 horror film "Midsommar," which featured a couple getting entangled with a pagan cult during a trip to Sweden.

Filming for series began in July 2019 in the United Kingdom after it was announced that Law would be fronting the cast. Munden was then hired as director for the first three episodes, which were written by Dennis Kelly ("Pulling"). That same month, the cast was expanded, and it was announced that Waterston, Considine and Watson had joined the cast. By August, Harris and Dagleish had joined the lineup, too, with Lowthorpe on board to helm the final three episodes.

With Law on board, it's no wonder that the show is already making waves. He's been recognized for his exceptional performances with a BAFTA Film Award, two Academy Award nominations and four Golden Globe nominations. He's also received nominations for three

Naomie Harris in "The Third Day"

Laurence Olivier Awards and two Tony Awards for his theater performances. In 2007, he was presented with an Honorary César award and was recognized for his contribution to World Cinema Arts and named a Knight of the Order of Arts and Letters by the French government.

Harris, meanwhile, is an English actress who is having somewhat of a moment. She won the hearts of critics with her role in the Oscarwinning film "Moonlight" (2016), a performance that also won her a slew of nominations (Golden Globe, BAFTA and Academy Award) for Best Supporting Actress. You may also know her from the most recent James Bond films, in which she stars as the legendary Eve Moneypenny – the newest installment, "No Time to Die," premieres in November of this year. In 2017, Harris was also appointed an Officer of the Order of the British Empire (OBE) for her work in drama.

With such an acting pedigree, it's no wonder there are such high expectations for the series. Prepare yourself to get lost in "The Third Day" when it premieres Monday, Sept. 14, on HBO.

Lamorne Morris stars in "Woke"

By Jessica Gosse

TV Media

"Woke"

In a world that is becoming increasingly aware of systemic racism, it seems only appropriate for Hulu to launch a new series that highlights the struggles of a Black up-and-coming artist, premiering Wednesday, Sept. 9. Lamorne Morris of "New Girl" fame stars as Keef Knight, a cartoonist who, despite many struggles in life, is about to finally achieve mainstream success with his comic book "Toast and Butter." Keef makes an effort to avoid controversy in both his life and his artwork, but when he has a run-in with some aggressive policemen, his world is shaken and he begins to question why it is "that people of color are always having to stand for something in [their] work." He doesn't realize how much his world has truly been changed until he begins to see inanimate objects come to life and confront him about the racial inequality to which he has been turning a blind eye, despite facing it himself every day. With a new perspective on life, Keef must manage to maintain what he has already achieved as his work begins to change from cute to more "woke" art. Inspired by the life of cartoonist, rapper and social activist Keith Knight (who, incidentally, serves as a writer), this timely series is not to be missed.

"Prisoners" (2013)

On Thursday, Sept. 10, you can watch this twisted thriller starring Hugh Jackman ("Bad Education," 2019) as father Keller Dover, whose daughter goes missing with one of her friends. Jake Gyllenhaal ("Spider-Man: Far from Home," 2019) is Detective Loki, who is assigned the case. As the police and the community search for the missing girls, a suspicious man in a campervan is found in the vicinity and arrested. As Loki interrogates the man, identified as Alex Jones (Paul Dano, "Escape at Dannemora"), he realizes that they have the wrong man, but that doesn't stop Dover from taking the law into his own hands. As Dover and Loki pull at separate threads, they begin to unravel different parts of the mystery of the missing girls, and it turns out the truth is far more disturbing than anyone could have imagined. Dover becomes increasingly desperate, and Loki becomes increasingly suspicious of everyone he encounters, and their respective investigations take turns they could never have anticipated. Viola Davis ("How to Get Away With Murder"), Maria Bello

("NCIS"), Dylan Minnette ("13 Reasons Why") and Terrence Howard ("Empire") also star.

"Awoken" (2019)

Sara West ("Winter") stars as Karla, a young medical student, in this intense horror flick available on Hulu starting Sunday, Sept. 6. Karla is determined to help her brother, Blake (Benson Jack Anthony, "800 Words"), who suffers from an ailment known as Fatal Familial Insomnia, which, if you haven't already guessed, will ultimately result in his death. As she searches for a cure and goes to great lengths to treat his symptoms, Karla begins to realize that there might be a much darker, more sinister reason for Blake's condition than she first thought. This one will leave you with chills.

Sharon Gless, Bruce Campbell, Jeffrey Donovan and Gabrielle Anwar star in "Burn Notice"

By Jessica Gosse

TV Media

"Burn Notice"

Michael Westen (Jeffrey Donovan, "Shut Eye") was working as a U.S. Army Ranger when he was recruited into the CIA, but after a long and successful career, he has been let go in this action drama available now on Prime. When Westen is beaten and kidnapped while on a CIA mission in Nigeria only to wake up back in his home town of Miami, Florida, he realizes that he has been "burned" - dismissed from the agency and left with essentially no identity, as all of his personal assets are frozen and his connections to the agency have been cut off. With nowhere else to turn, Westen is forced to move back in with his eccentric mother, Madeline (Sharon Gless, "Queer as Folk"), while he figures out why his career has suddenly been cut short. After strenuous efforts to contact the U.S. government, Westen discovers only that someone powerful wants him out of the picture, and as long as he stays in Miami, he can live a relatively normal life, but if he leaves, he will be hunted down by the very agency he used to work for. Resigned to his situation, Westen begins working as a private investigator with the help of his ex-girlfriend Fiona (Gabrielle Anwar, "Once Upon a Time"), who is an explosives expert, and his best friend Sam Axe (Bruce Campbell, "Ash vs Evil Dead"), a former Navy SEAL. While the cases they take are real, the private investigation business is merely a front, as the three of them work to discover who burned Westen and why. Binge all seven seasons of this thrilling series now on Prime.

"I'm Dying Up Here"

Season 1 of Showtime's dramedy based on the bestseller by William Knowdelseder is available on Prime this month, and if you didn't catch the series while it was airing on television, now is the perfect time to binge all 10 episodes. In the mid-1970s, comedians from across the country congregate at Goldie's Comedy Club in Los Angeles, where they vie for a shot at their big break - a spot on the "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," and Carson is played wonderfully by Dylan Baker ("Hunters") in the series. The club owner, Goldie (Melissa Leo, "I Know This Much Is True") mentors the comics with a bit of tough love in order to help them improve their chances, and the result is an intimate, often hilarious insider's look at the stand-up scene in Los Angeles before the 1980s. Ari Graynor ("Mrs. America"), Clark Duke ("Hot Tub Time Machine," 2010), Andrew Santino ("Dave") and Stephen Guarino ("Happy Endings") are just a few of the ensemble cast of comics whose stories both on and off the stage will leave you hungry for Season 2.

"Close Encounters of the Third Kind" (1977)

In a blue-collar town in Indiana, Roy Neary (Richard Dreyfuss, "Shots Fired"), an ordinary working-class man, has his life turned inside-out when a UFO flies over his truck at night, burning his face. This "close encounter" leads to Roy's obsessive compulsion for creating mountainlike structures, and a slew of other erratic behaviors that send him on a quest to uncover the truth about the strange images in his mind. the success of "Jaws" in 1975, Steven Spielberg, who was still relatively new to the director's scene in Hollywood, was able to convince Columbia Pictures to let him work on this passion project. Despite being released in the same year as "Star Wars," it was "Close Encounters" that won the Oscar for best cinematography. The American Film Institute has deemed it the 64th greatest American film ever made, and the iconic sci-fi film known for its incredible performances, stunning visuals and unforgettable sound is a must-see for cinephiles of all ages. Available on Prime now, you can share "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" with younger generations, or perhaps dive into the madness for the first time yourself.

"Eaten by Lions" (2018)

When a story begins with the parents being literally eaten by lions, it might come as a surprise to hear it praised as a "feelgood" film, but writer-director Jason Wingard ("In Another Life," 2017) has done just that, in a beautifully British fashion. Half brothers Omar (Antonio Aakeel, "Dublin Murders") and Pete (Jack Carroll, "Trollied") embark on a journey to find Omar's biological father, not to the exotic and romantic India as Pete anticipated, but to Blackpool, a seaside town in North West England. Along the way, the duo runs into a cast of zany characters that includes plenty of British comedy stars, proving to the audience that it isn't about the destination, but the friends (and enemies) you make along the way. Don't miss this delightfully multi-cultural, laugh-out-loud story of brotherly love, available on Prime now.

Tom Waes in "Undercover"

"Undercover" Season 2

Undercover agents Bob Lemmens (Tom Waes, "Dreamland," 2013) and Kim De Rooij (Anna Drijver, "Zwarte tulp") are back in Season 2 of this Belgian-Dutch crime drama premiering Sunday, Sept. 6, on Netflix. This second season is set to pick up nearly a year after the events of the first season finale, and there have been some big changes in that time. While Bob is still working as a cop, Kim is now working for an NGO that focuses on human rights. Her latest investigation with the organization leads her to Syria, where she uncovers an illegal arms trade and calls on her former colleague to help her. Bob goes undercover yet again, as the operation is being run through a horse ranch by arms-dealing $\bar{\text{brothers}}$ Laurent (Sebastien Dewaele, "Eigen Kweek") and JP Berger (Wim Willaert, "Cargo," 2017). Meanwhile, despite being in prison, Season 1 drug kingpin Ferry Bouman (Frank Lammers, "All You Need Is Love," 2018) is determined to use all of his resources to find out who the undercover agents were that put him away and get his revenge.

"Julie and the Phantoms"

Music mixes with the supernatural in this new series from Kenny Ortega (director of the High School Musical franchise) premiering Thursday, Sept. 10, on Netflix. Based on the popular Brazilian TV series of the same name, the show follows a teenage girl named Julie (newcomer Madison Reyes), who loses her passion for life after the tragic death of her mother. When spending time in her mother's old music studio, Julie is suddenly visited by three ghosts – Luke (Charlie Gillespi, "Charmed"), Reggie (Jeremy

Katherine Ryan stars in "The Duchess"

Shada, "Mr. Student Body President") and Alex (Owen Patrick Joyner, "Knight Squad") – who, when they were alive, were a dreamy '90s boy band. As she spends time with the boys, her love of life and music is reignited, and she begins singing again. Julie soon comes up with the brilliant idea to form a band, creating a musical outlet for herself while giving the boys a chance to become the musicians they always wanted to be.

"The Duchess"

Canadian comedian Katherine Ryan ("Beyond Bionic") serves as both star and creator of this comedy series premiering Friday, Sept. 11, on Netflix. Based on her own life, Ryan stars as Katherine, a single mom living in London with her adolescent daughter. As Katherine manages the various aspects of her life, from her job to her new boyfriend, she realizes that, despite the hardships of being a single mother, her daughter is her favorite part of life. With that in mind, she decides that what she wants more than anything is to have another child, and, in order for that child to be as wonderful as her first daughter, she should have it with the same father her horrible ex-boyfriend.

"The Haunting of Hill House"

If you haven't seen this 2018 supernatural horror series based (very loosely) on the 1959 Shirley Jackson novel of the same name, now is the time to dive in. When Olivia (Carla Gugino, "Manhunt") and Hugh Crain (Henry Thomas, "Stargirl") move their family into a mysterious, dilapidated mansion with plans to fix it up, they have no idea that the house itself will ruin their lives. The series moves back and forth between the past – life at Hill House with the young Crain family – and the present, as decades later, the individual Crain children struggle to deal with the horrors they endured in the home. Timothy Hutton ("American Crime") plays an aging Hugh Crain in the present, while Michiel Huisman ("Game of Thrones"), Victoria Pedretti ("You"), Kate Siegel ("Gerald's Game," 2017), Oliver Jackson ("Dracula") and Elizabeth Reaser ("The Good Wife") play his adult children, each more traumatized by Hill House than the last. It's an engaging series with a steady build-up and satisfying payoff, one every horror fan should see.

Q: Our local TV listings used to feature a show called "Longmire" a while back, and we wondered if there are any new episodes and where to find them.

A: "Longmire" has been through a lot since it last appeared on a TV schedule, but, for better or worse, its trials are over.

It aired its first three seasons on A&E, between 2012 and 2014, before getting canceled. It turned out the network may have underestimated the western drama's popularity, because a major public outcry followed, leading the online service Netflix to pick the series up again and produce new episodes.

So, if you lost track of it after it left the regular TV schedule, you have lots to catch up on. Indeed, it lasted as long off "air" as it did on: Netflix produced three more full seasons.

But that was it. Netflix announced ahead of time that Season 6 would be the show's last. That's good news, too, in a way. It meant the writers could give the show a proper, conclusive ending.

All this is to say that if you're willing to sign up for Netflix (if you haven't already), you've got lots more "Longmire" to see, and you'll be satisfied with the result.

Q: I'm trying to remember the name of a movie where Jake Gyllenhaal plays a police officer who helps Hugh Jackman find his daughter. I remember the ending being very anger-inducing.

Á: I'm feeling your pain here. It could seem like producers in the late '00s and early '10s were actively trying to make you forget the name of the movie you just watched (if you were watching a certain type of movie).

Let's try a thought experiment. Guess which of these actual film titles from the period between 2008 and 2014 is the one you're looking for: "Taken," "The Captive," "Prisoners," "Gone Girl," "Homefront," "Safe."

In fact, you're thinking of "Prisoners" (2013), but it was definitely part of a cinematic moment: tersely titled kidnap thrillers featuring the top chiseled leading men of the era. "Prisoners" was Gyllenhaal and Jackman's entry, while 2014's

"Gone Girl" was Ben Affleck's, 2008's "Taken" was Liam Neeson's, "The Captive" (2014) was Ryan Reynolds' and 2012's "Safe" was Jason Statham's. "Homefront" (2013), another Statham vehicle. wasn't a kidnap plot, but the title could easily have fit one.

For producers, participating in trends like these can be a risk, as you're taking a chance of your film getting lost among all the others, but it paid off for a lot of these films, including "Prisoners." Indeed, all of them at least made their money back, and a couple of them (namely "Taken" and "Gone Girl") were legitimate global mega-hits.

Getting back to your question, Ithink I can say, without spoiling anything, that "Prisoners" had one of those endings that doesn't give a lot of actual resolution, and those can indeed be very frustrating.

That, at least, differentiates some of these from the others. While "Taken" and "Safe," for example, are very straightforward, happy-ending movies that lean toward the chase and action element of a kidnapping movie, "Gone Girl" and "Prisoners" both prefer the paranoid and twisty side of the genre.
